"THE ANSON HARDY CUTTING MACHINES are the best, and cheapest low priced machine made, and have a national reputation for utility and durability."—The Eclectic, Chicago.

THE ANSON HARDY PAPER CUTTER is by far the best machine which can be obtained for a less price than one hundred dollars. It is of great strength. These machines have always taken the highest stand. It is the only machine to which is applied the Patent Movable Cutting Board. This device has a reputation of itself; by it, the cutting board can be instantly and accurately moved, so that a perfect cut is insured. This is a very important point in the machine, and one that is possessed by no other. It greatly reduces the labor of preparation in working the paper backward and forward. We cannot too strongly recommend the advantages of this patent movable board. It is worth the price of this machine, and purchasers should fully understand how highly it is to be valued."—Geo. P. Rowell & Co.'s Newspaper Reporter and Printer's Gazette.

THE LATEST IMPROVED HARDY CARD CUTTER is pronounced the most desirable Card Cutter in the market, for the general uses of a printing office.

The well known RUGGLES CARD CUTTER, with my latest improvements is still preferred by many printers, and holds its favoritism over other machines.

None genuine but those having my full address lettered in the casting.

Newspapers in want of advertising from first parties should send for my circular.

F. A. HARDY, Auburndale, Mass.

I will buy of those that buy of me. dec 14-

McMASTER & BRICE.

Gen. Grant on the Future.

Washington Telegram to the New York Tribune.

The President while conversing on the Electoral bill branched off upon a discussion of what he considers the present tendency of political parties in this country toward a complete reorganization. He said he has observed a movement in this direction for several years, and that he accepts the reaction of 1874, known as the tidal wave, as an indisputable evidence of it. He then said he thinks the Republican party will be able, in a great measure, to recover its lost ground, and possibly to maintain it through another Presidential term; but the experience of 1876, though favorable to the Republicans in the local elections and to a great degree in the Congressional districts, proves to him that, on National questions, the time for a reconstruction of political parties has come. He does not mean by this that he believes that the Democratic party will certainly secure permanent control of the government, but simply that the Republican party, shattered as it is by internal dissension, will only be able to rally its forces and harmonize its diverse elements upon some new question. He said that, of course, no one can know, until the result of the election is officially declared, which party will secure control of the Executive branch of the government, with its extensive and potential patronage. But whatever the result of the present contest it will only postpone the reorganization of which he spoke.

The President recognizes the fact that the South now presents a united front when permitted to act unrestrained by the interposition of local constituted authority to prevent the white people from resorting to illegal means of carrying the elections in these States. In those sections of the North where the Democratic victories were gained contrary to former results the means by which they were obtained may be considered exceptional. He thinks that before the end of the next Presidential term an entire reorganization of parties will take place in the South at least, and that in the contest of 1880 that section of the country will not again vote any more solidly for the Democratic candidates than the North for the Republicans. In the South, as political contests are now carried on, there is in his estimation neither a Democratic nor a Republican party. The struggle is simply for political power between the white people on the one hand, who desire to ignore the blacks entirely, and the colored people on the other. The loss to the Republican party of all the Southern States, under these circumstances, he thought the natural outgrowth of the opposition of the party in power before the war to that which grew out of that great struggle. If Mr. Tilden were elected, the President thinks that the two States nominally yet held by the Republicans would probably succumb. The moment this unanimity is established, he believes that the people of the South will begin to discuss measures of State policy, and that the result will be a division of political opinion which will crystallize into political organizations. This condition of affairs will be more wholesome. If nothing else caused a division, the jealousy of political leaders and the desire to control official patronage will cause a division where one party has entire control. Then he thinks both political organizations will put forth their best efforts to secure the negro vote, as the Democrats of the North have enjoyed the Irish and the Republicans cultivated the Germans and the Scandinavians.

Speaking of Florida, North Carolina and West Virginia, the President said that he believes the introduction of Northern capital and the emigration of Northern men will soon deprive them of their distinctive Southern peculiarities, and cause an organization of parties on the same principles as obtain in the North.

The Cincinnati Enquirer takes a bold stand editorially against the electoral tribunal. It denounces it as a packed jury, and declares that the Democrats have no hope of justice or fairness at its hands. It urges the Democratic members of the Commission to refrain from further participation in its proceedings, and calls upon the House to place every obstacle in its power in the way of the count, and to repudiate the decision when made.

A New Motor.

Philadelphians are to be given a sight of a new machine, invented by a clergyman in Maryland, which is called the Bradley promoter, and it is described at length by a correspondent of the Philadelphia Bulletin. The writer claims that "the motor employed in this invention is a well known agent, and one that is beyond comparison powerful in action and easy of management. Second, that the mode of utilizing it is marvellously simple, original and perfect. Third, that its economy is marked, being as one to five if not six or eight in comparison with steam. Fourth, that it is managed so as to be positively non-explosive and without danger at any stage. Fifth, that the machine is suitable for all mechanical purposes; and finally, it is unlike any thing else in the world of mechanics and will excite an interest in economics and revolutionize the present mode of propulsion in every department of mechanical motion. The machine and its capacities are not simply a great invention they are an inspiration, utilizing the forces of nature by the principles of natural laws, and confirming to the conceptions of man the perfections of the Divine intelligence in his works. In a few weeks the public will have an opportunity of seeing in operation in Philadelphia a promoter of the power of fifty horses, which is now nearly ready for exhibition."

A NORTH CAROLINA TRAGEDY.—In Watauga county, N. C., on Friday last, a crowd collected at the house of Elkany South, for the purpose of having a frolic. Mrs. South objected, but her wishes were about to be set aside when Smith Tyre, a member of the party, took her part. This brought about still harder words, and a free fight grew out of the discussion. In this fight Abe Stout and John Stout were both killed, and some others of the participants were injured. An attempt was made also to kill Mrs. South, but she escaped with her life. Frank Osborne, one of the rioters, fled and concealed himself, and a few days later an officer, armed with process, went in search of and found him. Osborne resisted arrest, was shot and instantly killed.

A LAWYERS' STRIKE.—There has been a lawyers' strike at Carlisle, England. The Clerk of the Peace announced that the treasury would in future allow only one guinea, instead of two, for a brief. The lawyers organized a most successful strike. They would have nothing to do with cheap-labor briefs. When the Deputy Recorder concluded his charge to the grand jury a barrister handed in a brief marked one guinea at the same time saying that there was a strike among the lawyers, who would not accept the briefs and the fee allowed. The clerk said the matter had been brought before the Deputy Recorder, who had arranged to pay the two guineas on this occasion. So the strike ended in a complete victory for the lawyers.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION OF PACKARD.—An attempt was made on Thursday to assassinate Packard. A young man named Weldon called with an associate at the State house in New Orleans and asked for Packard. Being ushered into the room where Packard and others were sitting he presented a pistol at Packard's head and said "When can I see you?" Packard knocked the pistol up and was slightly grazed in the arm by the ball. Others fired on Weldon and wounded him severely. Weldon is from Philadelphia, was until recently clerking in Mobile and is supposed to be insane. He says he was animated by motives of patriotism.

A few days ago, as the President was walking with his son Ulysses, Jr., near the White House, a passer-by accosted him and begged a light. The President handed his cigar to the stranger, who, between the whiffs, remarked: "That seems a very pleasant house to live in," to which was made the quiet rejoinder, "Well, it is pretty comfortable," and with a mutual salute they separated. It is supposed that the stranger knew whom he was addressing, and made the experiment to see what would come of it.

The Democrats, on the Grand Commission may well exclaim, in the language of the little orphan girl in one of Wordsworth's poems: "Kind sir, we are but seven!"
