Emperor William Cabbage.

THE best, largest, hardiest and most profitable variety of WINTER CABBAGE known in Europe, and imported to this country exclusively by the undersigned, where, with little cultivation, it flourishes astonishingly, attaining an enormous size, and selling in the market at prices most gratifying to the producer. In transplanting, great care should be used to give sufficient space for growth. Solid heads the size of the month of a flour barrel, is the average run of this choice variety. One package of the seed sent post paid on receipt of 50 cents, and one 3 cent postage stamp. Three packages to one address $1 00 and two 3 cent stamps. Twelve packages sent on receipt of $3 00.

Read what a well known Garrett Co. Marylander says of the Emperor William Cabbage:

BLOOMINGTON, GARRETT CO., Md., Jan. 22, 1877.

Mr. JAMES CAMPBELL, 66 Fulton St. N. Y. Dear Sir:—I bought some seed from you last spring, and it was good. Your Emperor William Cabbage suits this climate well. On a mountain side the seed you sent me produced Cabbages weighing thirty pounds each.

Very truly yours, JAMES BROWN.

I am Sole Agent in the U. S. for the famous

Maidstone Onion Seed.

from Maidstone, Kent Co., England, producing the most profuse and finest flavored Onions known and yielding on suitable soils from 800 to 900 bushels per acre, sown in drills. Mr. Henry Colvin, a large market gardener at Syracuse, N. Y., writes, "Your English Onion Seed surprised me by its large yield, and the delicious flavor of the fruit. I could have sold any quantity in this market at good prices. My wife says she will have no other onions for the table in future. Send me as much as you can for the enclosed $5.00."

One package of seed sent on receipt of 50 cents and one 3 cent postage stamp, three packages to one address $1 00 and two 3 cent stamps. Twelve packages sent on receipt of $3 00.

My supply is limited. Parties desiring to secure either of the above rare seeds, should not delay their orders. All seed WARRANTED FRESH AND TO GERMINATE. Cash must accompany all orders. For either of the above seeds, address JAMES CAMPBELL, 66 Fulton St., N. Y. mar 1-x6m

RELAPSING INTO BARBARISM.

A Coroner's Jury of Negroes Finds a Verdict of Death from Incantation.

An outrageous case of superstition is creating great excitement on Coosaw Island, and it is feared bloodshed may result before the interested neighbors are convinced that they are the victims of their own blind faith in the supernatural. It seems that a man named Snipe died a short time ago of consumption, and on his death-bed remarked that if he died his death would be owing to the influence of one Dago Hagood, who, some time last January, came up behind him, and putting one hand on each shoulder, asked, "Who is it?" a common custom among all classes. The circumstance was forgotten by both, and but for the death of Snipe, would probably never have been recalled had not Snipe before his death professed to have had a vision revealing to him that Hagood's playfulness had been the cause of his sickness.

The friends of Snipe, believing that his dying declaration must be true, sent to Dr. Johnson to hold an inquest, but the Doctor, after hearing the particulars, declined to do so. Snipe's father then threatened that if the law would not punish Hagood, he himself, would shoot him on sight. The neighbors again came to Beaufort for a coroner, and after consultation, Mr. Carleton concluded, for the sake of preserving the peace, he had better go; and went and held an inquest, but no further testimony could be elicited, and when the jury retired to deliberate he told them that no verdict against Hagood could be rendered, as there was nothing to implicate him in the death of Snipe. The jury, all colored, after long deliberation, refused to render any other verdict than that of murder against Hagood, and so the case stands at present.

Since the above was written we have seen a copy of the verdict of the jury, which is worth preserving and is as follows: "That Adam Snipe came to his death at Coosaw Island, in Beaufort county, on the 11th day of April, 1877, and that his death was caused through one Dago Hagood, he having some time previously put his hands around deceased's neck, producing a cough and poisoning said Adam Snipe, thereby willfully, unlawfully and feloniously causing the death of the said Adam Snipe, contrary to the peace and dignity of said State."

Mr. Carleton very properly refused to commit Hagood on such an absurd charge.—Beaufort Tribune, 4th inst.

The Port Royal Advertiser says that the jury brought in the same verdict three times, and that Hagood is now in jail.

The Bastinado.

From the London Times.

"T. H." writes: "I am boiling over with indignation while reading the account of the fearful bastinadoing of the unfortunate Ali Nasmi, narrated in your Pera correspondence. A few days ago I was reading an account of this punishment inflicted many years since on an unfortunate Englishman. As many of your readers may not be fully aware of the horrible nature of this torture, I give the account in the victim's own words. I am led to ask how it is possible that in our day such barbarous cruelty can be perpetrated for so small an offence as the poor student was guilty of, and which he so magnanimously owned? The writer says: 'The victim was thrown flat on his face and his legs bent up, so that the soles of the feet were horizontal; the feet were held in this position by a long staff and chain. At first the blows were moderately dealt, then they were laid on more roughly, and every stroke like the application of a red-hot poker. At first the pain was excruciating, but the feelings in time became numb, and it was like beating a bag of wool. It was six weeks before he could walk even with crutches, and for more than three years his feet and ankles were very much swollen, and though twenty years had elapsed when he published this account, he still suffered. He mentions instances of the bastinado having been applied for three days successively, and if the person survived, the feet were rendered useless for life; but in general, he observes, when between 500 and 600 strokes were inflicted death was the consequence.

Japanese Fans.

The manufacture of fans is an important branch of industry in Japan, and no fewer than 3,000,000 fans, valued at $90,000, were, according to Mr. Consul Annesley's commercial report on Hiogo and Osaka, lately issued, exported from those ports in 1875. Osaka is the principal city for the manufacture of the "ogi" or folding fans, which are those almost exclusively exported, all descriptions of the bamboo kind being made there, the figures, writing, &c., being executed in Kiyoto. The principle of division of labor, as explained in an extract from the Hiogo News, quoted by Consul Annesley, is carried out a long way in this branch of industry. The bamboo ribs of the fans are made by private people in their own houses, and combinations of the various notches out in the lower part is left to one of the finishing workmen, who form the various patterns of the handles according to plans prepared by the designer. In like manner the designer gives out to the engravers the patterns that he thinks will be saleable, and when the blocks have been cut, decides what colors are to be used for each part of the design, and what different sheets are to be used for the opposite sides of each fan. When these sheets with the sets of bamboo slips which are to form the ribs have been handed over to the workman, he, in the first instance, folds them so that they will retain the crease. This is done by putting them between two pieces of heavily oiled paper, which are properly creased. The fans are then folded up together and placed under pressure. When sufficient time has elapsed the sheets are taken out and the moulds used again, the released sheets being packed up for at least twenty-four hours in their folds. The ribs, which are temporarily arranged in order on a wire, are then taken and set into their places on one of the sheets after it has been spread out on a block and pasted. A dash of paste then gives the woodwork adhesive powers, and that part of the process is finished by affixing the remaining piece of paper. The fan is folded up and opened three or four times before the folds get into proper shape, and by the time it is put by to dry it has received an amount of handling Japanese paper alone would endure. When the insides are dry the riveting of the pieces together (including the outer covering) is rapidly done, and a dash of varnish quickly finishes the fan. The highest priced fan that was ever used in the days of seclusion from the outer world was not more than five yen. Since foreigners have been in Japan, however, some few have been made to order as dear as $10 and $15 each. The general prices of ordinary fans range from fifty sen per hundred to fifteen yen per hundred, though an extraordinarily costly fan is turned out at fifty yen per hundred. The number of fans ordered for the Philadelphia Exhibition alone amounted to over 800,000, at a cost of about $50,000. The sale of fans in olden times seldom exceeded 10,000 a year for the whole country.

FRUIT.—The earlier in the day fruits are eaten the better. They should be ripe, fresh and perfect, and eaten in their natural state, with the important advantage of its being almost impossible to take too many. Their healthful qualities depend on their ripeness, but if sweetened with sugar the acidity is not only neutralized, but the stomach is tempted to receive more than it is possible to digest, and if cream is taken with them the labor of digestion is increased. No liquid of any description should be drunk within an hour after eating fruits, nor should anything else be eaten within two or three hours after.—thus time being allowed for them to pass out of the stomach, the system derives from them all their enlivening, cooling and aperient influences. The great rule is, eat fruit and berries while fresh, ripe and perfect, in their natural state, without eating or drinking anything for at least two hours afterwards. With these restrictions, fruits may be eaten in moderation during any hour of the day, and without getting tired of them, or ceasing to be benefited by them, during the whole season.

A widow in Iowa, whose husband was burned to death while under imprisonment for drunkenness, has obtained a judgment for $6,000 against the man who sold him liquor.
