

Georgia papers brag because six colored men have been drawn on the Augusta juries. Georgia moves.

The only way to hold the people together is to hold the Democratic party together. That is why we contend so strongly for party discipline.

Wm. Lloyd Garrison thinks that the President made a mistake in yielding to the South. Who cares a stiver now, what William Lloyd thinks?

If the Chronicle and Constitutionalist sees fit to allude to the Constitutional Convention as the "Con. Con.," why should not our contemporary be dubbed the "Chron. Con." We will.

President Hayes is visiting New England. All along the route he has been met by crowds; and, besides speaking himself, has caused speeches to be made by Key, Schurz and Devens. Evidently, it is said, has tried once or twice to speak, but the train invariably moves on before he can get through his first sentence.

Returns of the election for the Georgia Constitutional Convention have been received from all the one hundred and thirty-seven counties except Echols and Wilcox. In this connection the Chronicle and Constitutionalist remarks, "The chances are that the polls were not opened in the missing counties." What sort of a State is it that has two "missing" counties, about which the rest of the State knows nothing yet, although about a fortnight has elapsed since the election?

In accordance with its views of what a county paper should be, THE NEWS AND HERALD will occupy a strictly neutral position between contestants for any nomination by the County Club. So soon as a nomination is made, however, the matter becomes a party question, and this paper will support the nominees of the Convention against all comers. In the mean time, every effort will be made to strengthen the organization of the party, so that it may wield its fullest powers.

The resolutions passed by the Executive Committee, Tuesday, are admirable; but even they might be pushed further. It should be distinctly announced that no one will be considered a Democrat who seeks an election to any office through any channel other than the Democratic convention. Even Georgia, the Democratic stronghold, suffers from independent candidates. Since South Carolina has determined to be straightout she should be severely so. We want no independent elected by Radical votes.

The President has issued an order forbidding any Federal official in 'future' to hold any place in a convention or party organization. This applies to about one fourth or more of all the officials, and is a great step forward. The Radical party has been kept alive for years only by the machinations of the Federal pap-smokers. This order is a merited rebuke to old Zach Chandler, who, while holding a cabinet position under Grant, was chairman of the National Republican party, and combined the two offices in having Tilden counted on. Hayes is doing pretty well, if he is a "fraudulent president."

The Charleston Lesson.

Charleston teaches a glorious lesson. It was thought that if the Radicals had one stronghold left in the entire State, it was Charleston county. There, not only have the blacks an immense majority, but in addition, they are, for the most part, massed and huddled together on the islands and in places inaccessible to the whites, so that little influence for good can be brought to bear upon them. The Democrats expected to be compelled to fight at great disadvantage. But they have joined battle and won a glorious victory. It is almost incredible that they should have met with no opposition. It must have been in a great measure due to the general demoralization of the Radicals, caused by the determined action of the Democrats. At first, Bowen hoped, by nominating Democrats, to divide the whites. But this death-bed repentance of his was scorned; and the Democracy determined to make the fight straight-out, and to accept no concessions whatever from the enemy. Hence the glorious victory of Tuesday.

With the redemption of Charleston, the back bone of Radicalism is completely broken. We need no longer entertain any fear of the result on a straight party issue, and our danger will come from so-called "independent Democrats." The party must be kept together as one man. Let us gain all the recruits we can, but suffer no desertion.

Matters in Europe.

The Czar benighted his troops just before they crossed the Danube.

The Russian army is pursuing a relentless course along its route. Territory as soon as occupied, is put in charge of Russian governors.

The New York Herald correspondent at Constantinople reports that it has been decided to send the Sultan's younger brother to the frontier of Asia Minor with a view to encourage the troops there. The young man has no military experience, but it is hoped that the presence of one of the imperial family will act as a stimulant on the Moslem population.

History repeats itself. The Turks are occupying defences all along the line of Trajan's wall, erected by the old Roman emperor to repel the incursions of the Scythians. This line consists of two walls, each of which it is believed, extended clear across the neck of land from river to sea, a length of about thirty-five miles. They are at present inaccessible only as disconnected mounds, covered with coarse vegetation. One line of wall lies to the northward of the valley and the other along the crests of the high land to the southward, and about five miles apart.

The Servians are reported as getting ready to fight. Despite the advice of Russia, Serbia seem that now is her last chance of throwing off the Turkish yoke.

A vessel received information from Salonica reports the discovery of a conspiracy among the Greeks in that city. An insurrectionary outbreak in Epirus and Thessaly may be looked for as soon as the Russians gain a decisive victory in Bulgaria.

An idea of the desperate nature of the recent fighting between Turkey and Montenegro may be formed from the fact that the Montenegrins admit the loss of every seventh man in their little army. In the whole history of warfare, perhaps no nobler instance of heroism is recorded than the stand made by these hardy mountaineers for their hearths and homes against such overwhelming odds. The New York Observer's Vienna correspondent says Austria has formally refused to intervene in behalf of Montenegro, unless the latter acknowledges herself hopelessly prostrate, and makes direct application for assistance.

The unfortunate Turkish commander who fails has evidently small chances of escape from the gentlemen who stay at home and know exactly what ought to be done in all cases, and are very wise after the event. Captain Seiff, commander of the Turkish monitor which was destroyed in the Danube by Russian torpedoes, has been tried by court-martial and found guilty of negligence. He has not been sentenced, but will probably be shot.

The Bassinet of Constantinople reports the invention by a naval officer of a torpedo-catcher which is capable of submarine movement. It would be premature to pronounce on the merits of the invention till it has been tested.

Some of the workmen engaged on the fortifications of Constantinople, in making some excavations, have lately discovered some coins bearing inscriptions and having the effigy of the emperor Constantine on their face.

The troops, having been removed from the South, are now to be sent to Utah to raise a row with the Mormons.

The Madia Maguire friends passed off quietly. There was a large attendance of the friends of the executed men, but they had the wisdom and decency to make no unseemly demonstrations.

At the United States Court at Atlanta, Judge Bradley issued the following order: "No warrant shall be issued by any commissioner of this court for the seizure or arrest of any person charged with a crime or offence against the laws of the United States upon mere belief, or suspicion of the person making such charge; but only upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation of each person, in which shall be stated the facts within his own knowledge constituting the grounds for such belief or suspicion. In open court this, the 31st day of May, 1877."

The Peruvian rebellion has come to an end, the rebel iron-clad Huascar, which held out after the insurgents had been defeated, having surrendered and returned to her allegiance. There is a little of humor, entirely characteristic of South America, connected with the affair. While at sea the Huascar was somewhat roughly handled by two British war vessels, when she ran into Peruvian waters and asked the other ships of the Peruvian fleet to come out and whip the British for daring to interfere in a family row. The invitation was prudently declined, however, and Great Britain is saved from a small war with an American Power.

No wonder the cyclone comes along once in a while.

In the Jardin d'Acclimatization a bridegroom and his friends took seats on the elephant, the bride following on foot. Mrs. Belknap is at Keokuk, Iowa, where her friends have received her with warm welcomes. A Washington letter-writer says: "Few women, I think, could have accepted the bouleversement with the courage she evinced. It was courage and fortitude, never defiance. Here she remained so long as her duty to her husband required it of her, and patiently looked on from her window, on the uppermost floor at the Arlington, at the old life going on through the gay season without her who less than a year before had been one of the most admired and sought of all leaders in that round of pleasuring. She lived in the greatest retirement, taking her meals in her room and receiving her friends there, and declined all invitations except to the houses of intimate friends, and then only when she was sure of meeting no strangers. Her baby was ill for many weary weeks, during which she devoted herself day and night to nursing the little sufferer, who is now happily restored to health."
