INDEPENDENT CANDIDATES.

From the News and Courier, August 11.

There is serious danger to the Democratic party in such divisions and dissensions as are seen in Newberry and Fairfield. The remedy is with the people; but the Conventions who nominate candidates can do much in the way of avoiding the occasions of splits and bolts. It should be made the invariable rule to allow no person to be balloted for as a candidate for a nomination, until, in person or by his representatives, he shall have bound himself to abide by the action of the Convention and to support its nominees. The Conventions also should be extremely careful to nominate strong men. In our judgment a bare majority should not be sufficient for a choice. A candidate who cannot secure a two-thirds vote is sufficiently unpopular to be unsafe in these times. Again, if Conventions cannot nominate acceptable candidates, the choice can be devolved directly upon the people in primary elections. It is an open fight. The candidate who receives the highest number of votes at the primaries then becomes the regular candidate of the party.

No independent candidates! must be the cry everywhere, if the Democrats desire to retain and consolidate their power.

From the Journal of Commerce.

There is no State in the Union where the Democratic party has greater need of thorough organization and complete discipline, for its permanent ascendancy and for the future security of the people, than in South Carolina. In its harmonious action and compact movement rest our hopes and prosperity. These are now fully in sight, but the result will depend entirely upon the wisdom, unanimity and consolidated power with which we go forward. Without the exercise of these our victories may prove disastrous in the end. The only danger to be apprehended is division among ourselves. In personal preferences men will differ; and division in elections can be avoided only by adhering steadfastly to the rules of party organization and of party government, in making a party choice. Whenever these are abandoned and men undertake to act on their own judgment, outside and independent of the regular decision of their party, they become disorganizers of the party, violators of its rules, and practically the worst enemies to success, which it can have.

The primary meetings held for the nomination and election of delegates to the County Conventions, decide the action of the Party Conventions. All interested in elections to office should therefore use their influence at the primary meetings, to secure the sort of delegates they desire at these Conventions, which make the nominations of the party candidates. After all these methods are used for obtaining the sense and judgment of the party in the regular way, it is incumbent upon every member of this great organization to abide by the result, and to sustain the action of his delegates. No true Democrat—no man worthy of party association—no one comprehending the essential value of the great principles of the Democratic party, on which alone hinge the future safety of this country, can undertake to throw off party allegiance and act independently.

From the News and Courier, August 13.

There seems to be, in Fairfield county, some opposition to the regular Democratic candidates by citizens calling themselves Democrats. Exactly what the grievances of these disaffected persons are, we have been unable to discover. Of course there is the clap-trap usual on such occasions of "King Caucus," "stifling the voice of the people," &c. These words are generally the firebrands used by disappointed demagogues to kindle strife, and we warn the Fairfield Democracy against them.

It is better to submit to some seeming injustice, if injustice has been done, than to check the tide of Democratic victory now sweeping over our State. These "Citizens' Tickets" are evidences of dissension in our own ranks which cannot but strengthen and encourage our enemies, and make us contemptible and untrustworthy in the eyes of our faltering colored allies. The malady is a contagious one, and will affect the fair proportions and robust health of the Democracy, if it be allowed to spread.

Democrats must stand shoulder to shoulder under all circumstances, and those who persist in attempts to ruin the party must be counted among the Radicals and negroes by whose tainted votes they hope for election. The rule holds good in politics as in morals: if thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out and cast it from thee, for it is better that thou enter into life halt or blind, than that thy whole body be cast into hell.

From the Capital Journal and Gazette.

Independent Democratic candidates for any office are out of place just now in South Carolina, and he who favors or justifies them is himself demoralized, if he only knew it.

From the Mississippi Democratic Convention.

Resolved, "That unity and harmony are essential to victory; that all independent movements are dangerous to the integrity of party organizations; that all independent candidates are inspired solely by lust for office, and shall be treated as common enemies to the welfare of the people and avowed enemies of the Democratic party of the State of Mississippi."

An Amazonian Outbreak.

One of the most striking features of the recent riot in Chicago was the presence of frenzied women in large numbers. The Inter-Ocean says:

"After the men had been driven to their lairs, women renewed the disturbance. Hundreds of these Amazons congregated in the vicinity of Twentieth and Fisk streets. The nearest factory from that corner was the Goss & Phillips place. The crowd rapidly increased. Women with babies in their arms joined the enraged female rioters. The streets were fluttering with calico of all shades and shapes. Hundreds were bareheaded, their disheveled locks streaming in the wind. Many were shoeless. Some were young, scarcely women in age and not at all in appearance. Dresses were tucked up around the waists, revealing large understandings. Open busts were as common as a barber's chair. Brawny, sunburnt arms brandished clubs. Knotty hands held rocks and sticks and wooden blocks. Female yells, shrill as a curlew's cry, filled the air. The swarthy features of the Bohemian women were more horrible to look on in that scene than their men in the Halsted street riots. The unsexed mob of female incendiaries rushed to the fence and yard of Goss & Phillips' manufacturing company. The consternation which this attack created extended to Twenty-second street, at that hour very quiet. A crowd of men gathered on Fisk street to witness this curious repetition of the scenes of the Parisian Commune. The fence surrounding the yard gave way and was carried off by the petticoated plunderers in their unbridled rage. There was fear for a little while that the Amazonian army would continue their depredations. Word was despatched to the Hinman street station, and a force of officers under Lieutenant Vesey pushed down to the corner of the contest. The women hissed as they saw the blue coats march along. Some of the less valorous took to their heels incontinently. Some developed into wonderful athletes, and ditches were danced over as though they were the floor of some popular ball-room. Others stood their ground. "A shower of missiles greeted the boys as they came smiling along left front into line. One woman pitched a couple of blocks at the heads of the officers and then moved on to attend to her family duties. The men were weak in the strength and forcefulness of their language compared with these wretches. Profanity the most foul rolled easily off their tongues with horrid glibness, expressions were made use of that brought the blood mantling to the cheek of the worst hardened men in the crowd of spectators. It was awful. Several shots were fired, by whom was not known. The police soon restored order, and drove the women back, and finally scattered them. This most disgraceful of occurrences is the most disgusting revelation that has yet deepened the shades of the already too black record of riot and villainy which for nearly a week disgraced the fair fame of Chicago."
