—AT OUR HOUSE—

J. D. McCARLEY,

may 3

Proprietor.

A Plucky Mayor.

During the recent riot at Scranton, Pa., Mayor McKune acted with distinguished bravery, and at the hazard of his life dispersed the mob after several had been killed. The coroner's jury found a verdict of wilful murder against the persons who fired, but the mayor called out troops and prevented their arrest. A reporter of the Philadelphia Times says:

In view of the verdict of the coroner's jury in the matter of the killing of the rioters of this city, the statements of the mayor himself as to the responsibility for the "order to shoot" and the circumstances out of which that order arose will be interesting. The mayor gave me the following statement the morning after the occurrence. It will be seen that he boldly assumes the responsibility of giving the order to fire. He said: "Up to yesterday morning (Thursday, August 2) I was under the impression that matters would be settled without the intervention of the military. The D., L. and W. cars were moving, the pumps were going and from all indications I could gather I expected to have had to say that the miners were going to work to-day. About 10 o'clock I was in my office holding court when information came that the mob were driving the men away from the company's shop and furnaces. In company with Lieutenant Browne, of my police force, I started toward the stores, and in passing Washington avenue I saw a large and excited crowd around the shops. Here also a young employe met me with a request from Mr. McKinney, saying that his daughter, who was the telegraph operator at the company's shop, was inside the building and should be rescued. I walked hastily down through the crowd some 800 feet, and found the door fastened. The young man then said that it was all right. As I was going through the crowd I ordered them to disperse, and when I found the door fastened I attempted to return. I had proceeded about fifteen steps when a lot of half-grown boys began to jostle me, and one of them struck me in the face. Immediately, however, upon this several of the working men whom I knew as personal acquaintances, formed a cordon, as it were, about me, but they, too, were about becoming overpowered by the pressure of the yelling mob when Father Dunn came up. Immediately he threw the authority of the priesthood about me, and ordered the men to stand back and do me no harm. In this way we made about a hundred feet toward the avenue, the crowd yelling and hooting all the time. The leaders of the mob, then, seeing the determined spirit of the priest, made a rush at him, caught him and took him boldly away from my side. I was then about three hundred feet from the avenue, every approach to which was jammed with a mob of excited people. In the meanwhile I had been pressed by the crowd so much that I gave the signal to one of my men to ring the alarm bell, which was the signal to the armed men under my orders to turn out. Before reaching the avenue the cordon of friendly working men which had protected me thus far from bodily harm became disintegrated, and I was at the mercy of the mob. But at this moment also I saw my posse, armed with forty rifles, marching down the street, headed by Lieutenant Browne, an old Confederate soldier. The crowd then surged up against me with even more violence, and I was struck several times. When, however, the posse was immediately opposite me in the street, and within twenty-five feet of me, I got the worst blow of all on the back of my head. Shots were then being fired at my men, and one of them dropped out of the ranks as though he was shot. Then I gave the order to fire as well as I could. I am perfectly willing to assume the responsibility of giving the order to fire."

The mayor's face looked as though he had been at Donnybrook fair and had gotten pretty badly beaten with a shellala.

The San Francisco Chronicle comments on the strange fact that, although in the last three years the Belcher, Crown Point, Justice, Chollar Potosi and Ophir mines have produced $18,000,000 worth of ore, the stockholders have netted not a cent, but have had to contribute $2,314,000 in assessments, and still have a debt of $1,000,000.

GYPSY BANDS.

Hungarian Music at Home—Musicians at Budapest.

Correspondence New York Herald.

Perhaps the most delightful feature of Budapest next to its variety of summer resorts is the gypsy music. Already at the first Hungarian railway station on the way from Vienna to Pest, at Neubensel, the wild, sad, plaintive and ineffably touching strains of a gypsy band greet the ear of the wayfarer. The American reader has probably received a faint idea of the striking characteristics of the Hungarian gypsy music from Liszt's "Rhapsodie Hongroise," Erkel's "Hunyadi Lázio" and the "Rakoczy March," played so exquisitely by Thomas's band in New York two summers ago. But to appreciate the wild, racy, altogether indescribable flavor and sublime, rugged beauty of Hungarian music you should come to Budapest and listen to one of the gypsy bands like that of Racz Pal. It is a music which seems to seize hold of every nerve and pulse, of every heart string, to vibrate it at will, to stretch it to its utmost tension of ecstasy with its joy, and in the next moment to almost rend it with the unutterable despairing sadness of its tones. It laughs and weeps in the same note almost. A very true saying was that "Woineid unterhalt sich der Unger" (the Hungarian enjoys himself weeping). But the Hungarian gypsy bands here are not heard at their best at the hotels and gardens. You must attain these gypsy fiddles to their most fiery magic by a good round heap of florins. Go to some entertainment of Hungarian nobles or swells, where they collect one hundred or two hundred florins for the band, and then, oh! how they play, with the glistening gold or the equally pleasant paper rags before them. When a Hungarian swell gives a dinner or supper he always has some gypsy band to play the favorite melodies of every guest. The dusky musicians—those Ole Bulls who never learned a note—are told to step up close to the guests, and there standing right before them they fiddle away till two or three in the morning. Now this one, now that one of the guests will shout out the name of his favorite tune and interrupt the piece they are just then performing. It is no matter, however; the gypsies are used to these interruptions, and on they go making their loved instruments not only speak, but scream for the very joy and sorrow which these wild sons of the Preszta feel as they are fiddling away into the night. The sight of the flying champagne corks, of the jolly, animated faces round them, the shouts of interruption, the approving glances, the delightful glimpse of a new twenty florin bill which some Magyar cavalier flings at him, all this inspires the gypsy fiddler till his whole body seems to sway in the rapt, wild delirium of his own music. Who can ever forget the gypsy bands of Hungary who has heard them on some such favored night?

THE COLOSSAL BRONZE STATUE OF VICTORY which stand in the Park, at Lowell, before the tomb of the first soldiers that fell in the revolution, is a lasting and beautiful tribute of art. It is one of the first objects sought by strangers visiting our sister city, which indeed many visit purposely to see this elegant object of high art. It was obtained from the King of Bavaria by Dr. J. C. Ayer, to whom his Majesty was especially gracious in acknowledgment of what his remedies are reputed to have done for the suffering sick. It was donated by the Doctor to the City of Lowell as a permanent and speaking emblem of the victories both of science and arms.—Hagerstown (Md.) Press.

The Fence Law in Other Counties.

Ninety-Six township, in Abbeville, voted for the change. The other townships voted against it.

Laurons county voted against the change.

Chester county voted for the change in all the townships.

A number of townships in Anderson will adopt the change.

In York county, seven townships voted—four in favor of, and three against, the change.

Other counties have not yet been heard from.

More than five million cans of corn are now packed in Maine annually, and sold in various parts of the world, giving employment to from 8,000 to 10,000 persons during the packing season.
