PROSPECTUS.

HISTORY of South Carolina, —BY— REV. R. LATHAN.

SO soon as a sufficient number of subscribers are secured to warrant the enterprise, I propose publishing a HISTORY of SOUTH CAROLINA.

The work will embrace a complete history of the State from the first discovery of the soil; the settlement of the territory at different periods; the history of the State under the Proprietary Government, under the Royal Government, and through the Revolutionary period, and to the close of the Revolutionary war.

The movements of the several Whig military chiefs are accurately traced, and the several battles fought during the Revolution are minutely described.

The whole will make a book of more than 700 pages of the size of Stephens' History of the United States. It will be printed on good paper, with clear type, and bound in substantial cloth. To subscribers the book will be delivered for FOUR DOLLARS per copy.

Persons desiring to canvass for the work are requested to communicate with the author at Yorkville, S. C., for terms, &c. R. LATHAN, Yorkville, S. C., August, 1877. sep 8-1f

VEGETINE

Rev. J. P. Ludlow Writes:

178 BALTIC STREET, BROOKLYN, N. Y., November 14, 1874.
MR. H. R. STEVENS:
Dear Sir—From personal benefit received by its use, as well as from personal knowledge of those who have benefited thereby, I can most heartily and sincerely recommend the Vegetine for the complaints which it is claimed to cure.
JAMES P. LUDLOW, Late Pastor
Calvary Baptist Church, Sacramento, Cal.

Vegetine. She Rests Well.

SOUTH POLAND, ME., Oct. 11, 1876
MR. H. R. STEVENS:
Dear Sir—I have been sick two years with the liver complaint, and during that time have taken a great many different medicines, but none of them did me any good. I was restless at night, and had no appetite. Since taking the Vegetine I rest well, and relish my food. Can recommend the Vegetine for what it has done for me. Yours respectfully,
MRS. ALBERT RICKER.
Witness of the above, Mr. George M. Vaughan, Medford, Mass.

Vegetine. Good for the Children.

BOSTON HOME, 14 Tyler Street, Boston, April, 1876.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:
Dear Sir—We feel that the children in our home have been greatly benefited by the Vegetine you have so kindly given us from time to time, especially those troubled with the scrofula.
MRS. N. WORMELL, Matron.

Vegetine.

Rev. O. T. Walker Says:

PROVIDENCE, R. I., 164 Transit Street, H. R. STEVENS, Esq.
I feel bound to express with my signature the high value I place upon your Vegetine. My family have used it for the last two years. In nervous debility it is invaluable, and I recommend it to all who may need an invigorating, renovating tonic.
PASTOR OF BOWDEN-SQUARE CHURCH, BOSTON.

Vegetine.

Nothing Equal to it.

SOUTH SALEM, MASS., Nov. 14, 1876.
MR. H. R. STEVENS:
Dear Sir—I have been troubled with scrofula, cancer, and liver complaint for three years. Nothing ever did me good until I commenced using the Vegetine. I am now getting along first-rate, and still using the Vegetine. I consider there is nothing equal to it for such complaints. Can heartily recommend it to everybody.
Yours truly,
MRS. LIZZIE M. PACKARD,
No. 16, Lagrange St., South Salem, Mass.

Vegetine.

Recommend it Heartily.

SOUTH BOSTON.
MR. H. R. STEVENS:
Dear Sir—I have taken several bottles of your Vegetine, and am convinced it is a valuable remedy for dyspepsia, kidney complaint, and general debility of the system. I can heartily recommend it to all sufferers from the above complaints. Yours respectfully,

A MODEL CARPET-BAGGER.

THE EARLY HISTORY OF JOHN J. PATTERSON OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Swindling in early life—A Newspaper Theft—Brazen Effrontery—The Avenging Nemesis—Rejected by the Senate—Convicted of Bribery—Confessing Himself a Forger—Robbing His Sisters—A Choice Chapter of Crimes.

Now that the efforts making to bring John J. Patterson to justice have forced him again into notoriety, it may be of interest to our readers to refresh their memories with the details of his early life in Pennsylvania. His career in that State was a befitting preface to the course he has run in South Carolina. The following is a synopsis of the biography of Juniata's great statesman, as first given to the world by the New York Sun of November 5, 1873. The facts are all matters of public record, and cannot therefore be denied by the cheeky criminal:

JOHN J. PATTERSON

was born in Juniata county, Pennsylvania, his father being a well-to-do and respected citizen of that place. The subject of the present sketch entered the school of politics in 1853, by moving from Juniata to Harrisburg, where he purchased of Theo. Fenn and Philo Ledgwick the Pennsylvania Telegraph. There was nothing about him at that time to make it possible to conceive of any political earthquake mighty enough to upheave him into the seat of John C. Calhoun. He had already set out on the road which formerly led to the penitentiary; and as a christian statesman had not then been invented as employment for the superfluous rogues of the land, John's chance of ending his days in making shoes or plaiting chair bottoms for the State were as good as those of any young man of his age.

THE FIRST FRAUD

committed by Patterson after emerging from obscurity was in swindling Mr. Fenn out of the purchase money for the Telegraph. He paid one-third cash, and gave his notes for the balance at stated periods. He represented that he owned $8,000 in his own right, besides his expectations from his father. This subsequently proved to be a lie out of the whole cloth.

A few months after this, and before his notes became due, Patterson sold the Telegraph to Messrs. Clyde & Miller, for an advance of three thousand dollars, and left the city. Fenn came to Harrisburg at the maturity of the notes, but did not find his man. A diligent search brought Patterson to light, but he said he had no money, and must wait till Clyde & Miller's notes became due, when Fenn should receive every cent due. He refused to hypothecate Clyde & Miller's notes as security, and on Fenn's threatening to attach the money in their hands, Patterson put up a whimpering plea that he was engaged to marry a high-toned young lady. "If," said he "you proceed against me in this way, my prospects will be blasted. Trust to my honor, and I solemnly declare I will pay you every cent I owe you." Fenn replied, "It shall be as you say, Mr. Patterson, a debt of honor, and I will trust you."

ALAS FOR THEOPHILUS!

Patterson immediately disposed of his notes to one John H. Berryhill, and when Mr. Fenn next asked him to redeem his pledge, he laughed in his face, and told him coolly, to get the money the best way he could. Fenn, exasperated, went to court and obtained judgment in August, 1858, against Patterson for $3,904.22, with $918.17 of interest. But Patterson had no visible means of support, and the judgment could not be enforced. Fenn patiently bided his time till the old man Patterson died. But before he could step in, Patterson had confessed judgment to his wife, on the death of his father, for $10,000, and a judgment for that amount was entered in the Juniata court in favor of Lucretia Patterson, his wife.

HONEST JOHN AS A BANKER.

In the mean time Patterson had gone to Philadelphia where he began banking operations in copartnership with one Samuel Slaymaker

He stayed here just long enough to fleece his partner and several creditors out of goodly sums of money

A POLITICAL PIMP.

About this time, Simon Cameron, the Winnebago chief, in whom it is difficult to say whether ability or wickedness is predominant, had arisen from a craftsman and printer to a capitalist and statesman. His peculiar politics demanded peculiar tools; and Simon was not long in discovering the transcendent ability of Patterson, as a political pimp. Patterson was entrusted with the task of manipulating the counties of Juniata, Snyder and Northumberland. In this humble occupation, occasionally swindling politically and financially in a small way, Patterson continued until the opening of the war displayed a fine field for a man of his acquisitive genius. Cameron became Secretary of War, and Patterson was made paymaster in the army. By the time the senate met, it was proven that Honest John had mistaken government funds for his own, and that body refused utterly to confirm the appointment, upon direct evidence of flagrant overcharges. He quit the army in disgrace. But another arena opened for him.

A CANDIDATE FOR CONGRESS.

Cameron had him nominated for Congress from the fourteenth Pennsylvania district which at that time had a Republican majority of 2,500 votes. But the avenging Nemesis was on his track. Fenn had waited as one without hope for that balance due from Patterson, for eight long, weary years. But it had never come. Honest John laughed all duns to scorn. So when Patterson began to stump his district, Fenn concluded to stump it too. He had hundreds of handbills struck off, entitled "A plain Statement of Facts," in which the entire newspaper transaction was detailed in every particular. These he tacked up at every corner, distributed in every public place, and in addition, he himself narrated his story to every farmer he met, and who had known him through his former connection with his paper. The handbill was racy reading, containing such expressions as the following: "He had his property and refused to pay me from an innate dishonesty and a predetermination to defraud me." "Can he have the presumption, aye, the insulting impudence to ask a man to vote for him. Or even to look an honest man in the face?" "Spurn him from your presence and teach other knaves who aim to make party politics subservient to their ambition and their avarice, that 'honesty is the best policy,' and combine to lash the rascal naked through the world!"

"Will the Republican party of this district sanction and uphold the dishonesty of this man, Patterson, to represent the district with this brand of dishonesty stamped upon him? Has it lost that high moral integrity that has ever characterized it? Will it put such a man in a position to plunder the nation, or sell his party whenever he can do so for his own benefit? What else can be expected of a knave who aspires to such a position?"

This appeal, with Fenn's personal canvass and the general odium into which Patterson had even then fallen at home, led to his disastrous defeat; for the Republican party had not then become debauched, as it now is.

Patterson was led to consider Fenn a pretty troublesome customer to have hanging around his heels; and, some time after made peace with him by satisfying his judgments. The widow of Fenn's partner fared not so well, for Patterson paid that in insurance stock which subsequently and utterly worthless. In 1873, Mrs. Ledgwick wrote saying that Patterson had never paid the debt. She adds "Mr. Patterson's conduct was rascally, as you probably know. I have never had any communication with him since Mr. Ledgwick's death. Never has he written a word about redeeming the bogus stock." The Ledgwick here referred to was the brother of General John Ledgwick, of the army of the Potomac.

PROVED TO BE ROGUS,

ANOTHER CHAPTER OF CRIME.

In the spring of 1863, there was to be chosen a United States Senator from Pennsylvania. The Democrats had a majority of one on joint ballot. Cameron was the Republican candidate, and Buckalew the nominee of the Democratic caucus.
