THREATENING TO KICK OUT OF THE TRACES.

A Recent Caucus Indicates that an Open Revolt Cannot be Long Delayed --The Louisiana Senatorial Question --A Committee of Republican Senators to Institute a System of Presidential Bulldozing.

WASHINGTON, November 11.—The signs of the war upon Hayes within his own party becomes more manifest with each passing day, and open revolt cannot much longer be postponed. If the proceedings in Saturday's caucus could be given to the public there would be found in them sufficient cause for the gravest apprehension that certain Republican senators either intend that he shall take the back track with reference to the appointments, or it will be their aim to place him in the position of relying on Democratic support. One marked feature of the caucus is the secrecy with which its proceedings are kept. The injunction of strictest secrecy was placed on the members; and a more remarkable fact is the manner in which the injunction is heeded. It is known, however, beyond peradventure that the supporters of Hayes forced those who desired to antagonize him in a position to show their hands, and the fact was unmistakably developed that if the Democrats will stand by the President his enemies are powerless to do him positive injury, for the reason that they are divided among themselves, at all events at least as far as his nominations are concerned. There was a sentiment expressed among Republicans—notably by Hoar and Dawes, of Massachusetts; Matthews, of Ohio, and Christiancy, of Michigan—that when the President made nominations for office from among Republicans who were not obnoxious to the localities from which they were selected, the Senate should not refuse to advise and consent thereto. On the question of the admission of Kellogg, from Louisiana, the party shows a more cohesive front. There are Republican senators who, while they will uphold Hayes in the matter of his Southern policy and appointments, will vote to seat Kellogg. The loophole that these give as a vent to ease their consciences is that he was elected by a Legislature having a recognized quorum, and that when the Nichols Legislature assumed to perform the act of electing a senator it was none else than null and void, because a senator had already been elected. It is on the matter of the Louisiana senatorship that Hayes is beset with real danger.

The Democrats assume that inasmuch as they are willing to stand by him, the influence of his position should be used in behalf of Spofford, because he was elected by a Legislature coalesced by the Commission sent by Hayes to fuse the two rival bodies, and because its acts, and not the acts of the Packard body, receive recognition and the sanction of law-abiding citizens of the State. There has been a tremendous pressure within the Republican party brought to bear upon Hayes to induce him to use his influence in behalf of Kellogg. To-day Senators Gordon and Lamar had a long conference with Hayes. They stated to him that if he yielded to the solicitations, and Kellogg was seated, the Democratic members of the Senate would lose faith, become disheartened, and such an act might be the means of dividing the Democrats as to the support which they would otherwise accord him, to perhaps even a larger extent than the Republicans were now divided. The danger, then, is: No matter how Hayes may act, he is sure to lose ground; for if he takes a position inimical to the seating of Spofford, he will weaken Democratic faith in his honesty of purpose, and will, to a partial extent at least, repudiate his own policy, as well as his own acts.

FOR AND FORNIST.
Those who staunchly defended the President in the caucus were Senators Hoar, Dawes, Christiancy and Matthews. Those who made leading speeches in opposition to many of his appointments were Senators Conkling, Edmunds, Howe, Hamlin and Wade. The appointments most vigorously discussed were those made in Georgia, Alabama and Louisiana. Edmunds, in some very sarcastic reflections, alluded particularly to the unfitness of the appointment of Hilliard to be minister to Brazil, and Fitzsimons to be marshal for Georgia. The tone of those who objected to these appointments was that the President could have found Republicans to have filled the places, and should have selected persons to fill these stations outside of the Democratic party. Stanley Matthews called on the President soon after the caucus adjourned, and was closeted with him until a late hour last night. Subsequently he called at Charley Foster's room, and the two will evidently prepare some new dispensation of peace which will be the converse of last winter's treaty, inasmuch as they will now have to deal with Republicans instead of the Democratic party. It is understood that within a day or two Hayes will be visited by leading Republican senators, who will plainly tell him what they intend to do. If he has as much sand in his craw as his friends give him credit for, he can precipitate a row very expeditiously.

A SOUP-BONE CANDIDATE.—There has just been made public a funny incident of the recent Ohio election. Mr. John C. Covert, of the Cleveland Leader, was running for the Legislature on the Republican ticket, when it was recalled by the opposition managers that in June, 1876, he had written a very sensible article on "Cheap Living," an article in which he showed, with the ability of Miss Juliet Carson, that a soup could be made at a cost of six cents for peas, onions, asparagus, spinach and a small beef-bone which the butcher was almost willing to give away, a soup that was savory and nutritious and would make a meal for a poor man's family. Mr. Covert was thereon assailed as "the soup-bone candidate," who thought that refuse beef-bones were good enough for American workmen; cartoons presented him as lulling out soup in exchange for workingmen's votes, or as running down the workingmen armed with a soup bone and a syringe charged with broth. The result was that it took the official count to decide that he was elected by some twenty votes, though his district went Republican by a large majority. This recalls the fact that Tom Corwin won his first congressional election in a district hopelessly opposition by telling that his opponent, who did indeed wear store clothes, slept in a night gown. He intended the story for a joke, but the freemen of Ohio took it in earnest, and rallying against the pampered aristocrat defeated him. A somewhat similar story is told of a Whig candidate in New York, who, stopping for dinner at a wayside inn, ordered his beef-steak to be broiled and not fried. Whether his alert constituents thought he was relapsing into savagery or putting on airs is not known, but they promptly made that broiled beefsteak a live issue in the campaign and he was defeated.—New York World.

Dr. Schorechewsky, the newly consecrated missionary bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church for Shanghai, is a Polish Jew, and was educated in the school of the prophets, in Poland, with the view of becoming a rabbi. In 1856 he was converted and ordained a deacon by Bishop Boone, in St. George's Church, New York, and went out with that gentleman to China in the same year. He is about forty-five years of age, with features strongly Jewish. He is very vivacious in conversation, his black eyes sparkling with animation.

Dr. Paul F. Eve, Professor of Operative Surgery in the Nashville (Tenn.) Medical College, and one of the leading surgeons in the Southwest, died suddenly in that city on Saturday of paralysis. He served as a surgeon in the Polish revolution of 1831, and received the golden cross of honor of Poland that year. He was president of the American Medical Association in 1857. Dr. Eve crossed the Atlantic fourteen times in the interest of his profession.

John Habberton, the author of "Helen's Babies," has failed as a lecturer. There is compensation in the thought that had he succeeded he might have demoralized the lyceums as much as he has the popular literature of the day.
