AFTER A HARD FIGHT, Gen. Joseph E. Johnston has been nominated for Congress from the third Virginia district.

WE PUBLISH with great reluctance the lengthy communication of Mr. D. R. Feaster, and do so purely because he seems to think that he ought to have a chance to reply, through the paper, to Mr. Gaillard's Feasterville speech, and because a refusal to publish it might be misconstrued. But we must now insist on a stoppage of the controversy, so far as THE NEWS AND HERALD is concerned. Mr. Feaster, together with his co-workers, Messrs. McLane and Clayton, has had a full hearing, both before and since the Feasterville meeting, and we can see no good to be done by a continuance of newspaper articles. We are ourselves heartily tired of the discussion, and we have every reason to believe that our readers are equally so.

Amnesty.

The Abbeville Press and Banner says:

Our able neighbor, of the Fairfield News and Herald, is of opinion that the government of South Carolina has extended amnesty to too many of the Republican thieves and bribe-takers. We hold a different opinion and are ready to support the government in all that it has done in that line, except perhaps in the case of Swails, of Williamsburg, where we fear there was some carelessness on the part of those who conducted that case. For our part, with a few exceptions, we are disposed to let the Republicans go unpunished as long as they do not attempt to return to politics. Patterson put Butler in the Senate. For this act we are willing to excuse him for buying his seat, especially as he bought the place which Elliott would otherwise have gotten. Let Patterson have amnesty. General Butler is not the man we take him to be, if he would prosecute him.

We regret that we have not the concurrence of our contemporary in this matter. We must still adhere to the opinion we always entertained that the administration has been much too lenient to the debauched Radical leaders. The Press and Banner admits that the case of Swails has been badly bungled. This is but one of many possible cases. Swails is a conspicuous example of misplaced clemency or culpable sloth. He is more offensive than Swails, and is much more powerful than the gingerbread statesman of Williamsburg. He not only escaped jail but even sat in Congress and killed some good Democrat's vote. What shall be said concerning the other "amnestied" thieves, who assembled in the Radical Convention and hurled mud against the Democrats by the handful? Had half a dozen of these miscreants been locked up in the penitentiary we should never have heard of a convention. Clemency to blackguards and footpads is misplaced. They mistake it for cowardice. Lastly, we most emphatically beg leave to demur to our contemporary's plea for Patterson. Patterson is the champion scoundrel of the party. He not only robbed and oppressed, but impudently gloried in his crime and taunted the good people of the State with their misfortunes. He sucked the blood of the State, and poured in troops to heal the wounds. He is a villain of the deepest dye. It is not for the simple offence of buying his seat in the Senate that we denounce him, but this crime should be used to bring down vengeance on his head for his other enormities, compared with which this is nothing. He should be sentenced for a full term in the penitentiary for this, and after that should be confined again for stealing the money of the Blue Ridge Railroad to buy up legislators to fasten a fraudulent debt on the State. Then, in succession, he should be punished for his other offences. So long as Patterson lives his fiery topkick should be a target for the officers of the law.

It will not do to hold that his vote seating Butler was a full propitiation for his past misdeeds. The State cannot compound such felony in this way. If Corbin had been seated, his term would have been short. Next year he, with Kellogg, would have been kicked out most unceremoniously, and General Butler would have then gained his seat. One seat makes little difference unless it reverses a majority. Patterson's single vote did not satisfy outraged justice. The penitentiary yawns for him yet. Senator Butler may not, indeed, be the man to prosecute Patterson, nor is it expected that he should be, but we take it that no one cares to risk his own popularity by a very zealous defence of this Pennsylvania thief. A long list of offences lies at his door. His deeds in the halcyon days of Radicalism are not forgotten. Wherever Patterson made an incendiary harangue in bygone days, there will be found men who will never be contented until he has been securely locked behind the bars of a dungeon. Nothing may come of amnesty now. But two years from this it may be a Banquo's ghost. The people will make inquiry of the public servants, why it was that of all the political thieves and cut-throats in South Carolina, not one has been made to feel the touch of the law. We still insist, with all due deference to the opinion of others, that there has been too much amnesty.

A WORD OF ADVICE.

The People of South Carolina Must Take Warning by the Experience of Others.

[From the Charlotte Observer.] In the light of our own recent experience we are prepared to give our South Carolina brethren a little advice which we trust they will accept in the spirit in which it is intended. The Republican party in our sister State is playing the same sharp and effective game that it put in operation in North Carolina, and its partial success here very likely has something to do with its adoption over the line. The North Carolina Radicals, seeing that they could not carry the State in the August election, refrained from putting out a ticket, and relied upon the absence of opposition and upon independent Democrats to disorganize the Democratic party. Their scheme, it cannot be denied, was in some measure successful. It is true that we carried the Legislature by a large majority—a majority, in fact, altogether larger than we have any need of; but at the same time we sustained losses and permitted the entrance of elements and influences which even yet distract the party in some sections of the State. Had the Republicans put out a State ticket, and had they made their usual fight, in the usual way, through their own men in the several counties, independent Democrats would have been unheard of, and having the advantage of a thoroughly united party our people would have come to the polls and swept the State by a majority greater than ever before. In the conduct of the campaign the Republicans exhibited their usual tact and political sagacity. They knew they could not elect their judges nor carry the Legislature, so they determined to do what was next best to disorganize the Democracy with a view to whipping it in some of the congressional districts in November, and thus rendering its majority inoperative in the future elections. Subsequent events have shown that this was the object of the enemy; it was successful, as stated, to the extent of reducing our majority in the Legislature slightly, and of giving them hope in the congressional campaign.

The campaign in South Carolina indicates a line of action on the part of the Republicans, similar in all respects to that pursued in this State. There is no opposition to the Democratic State ticket. The immediate tendency of this is to lessen the interest of the Democrats in the campaign, just as was the case here. We shall see as the campaign progresses if the parallel ends here. We venture to say that it will not, but that in the decidedly Radical counties, straight Radicals will be put up for the General Assembly, while in many of the close and doubtful counties, and even in some which are counted strongly Democratic, there will be mixtures of Democratic and Radical candidates, with hope in all those cases for the election of the Radical. There will be no avowed opposition to the Democracy, but in all the counties except those conceded to the Republicans, a guerrilla warfare will be conducted with a view to disorganizing the Democracy, securing the election of the Radical candidates for Congress through the divisions of the Democracy, and by the same means securing a sufficient power in the General Assembly to be able to name the successor in the Senate of Honest John Patterson.

The "announcement" columns of the weekly papers of South Carolina give ominous signs. We have pointed out to our friends across the line the danger to be apprehended; they know for themselves, without needing to be told, the remedy. Their only hope is in turning out in full force in support of their nominees. They are not yet so strong that they can afford to fight among themselves. Their salvation depends upon unity of action. If they falter they fall.
