

Keep Up Your Scott's Emulsion in Summer-time

What are your resources for the summer? Have you an abundance of health stowed away for the long, hot, depleting days, or does summer find you low in vitality, run down, losing flesh, and weak? Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil will give you the proper reserve force, because it builds up the system on a solid foundation. A tonic may stimulate; Scott's Emulsion not only "boosts," it sustains.

It is a wise precaution always to have at least a small bottle of Scott's Emulsion in the house. Unopened, it will keep indefinitely. Tightly corked, after using, kept in a cool place, it will remain sweet for weeks.

"That's Him."

A Western Exchange says: The man who wipes his nose on his shirt sleeves, picks his teeth with a fork, squirts tobacco juice on the stove, rides to mill with corn in one end of the sack and a stone in the other, drives to market with hickory bark lines, deposits his money in his last winter's socks, insists on paying his taxes in coon skins and wild honey, fastens one gallus with a wooden peg and wears 'possum belly pants, is the same old rooster who has no use for his home paper, and his brother is the fellow who tries to do business in town without advertising.

A TALK WITH TILLMAN.

Red-Hot on the Triff—Opposed to Annexation of Hawaii.

Atlanta, Ga., July 7.—Senator Ben Tillman, of South Carolina, spent several hours this morning in Atlanta. He arrived at 8:05 o'clock from the West and left on the Southern at noon.

The Senator was seen at the union depot by a Journal reporter. He is just back from a speech-making trip to Iowa. He spoke at Alba and at Des Moines. Both were Fourth of July orations, in spite of the fact that one was delivered on the third and the other on the fifth.

He was looking hale and robust and seemed none the worse for his long and tedious hot weather trip. His answers to all questions put to him were given in that energetic and vehement style for which the Senator is famous.

"What do you think of the Senatorial contest in South Carolina?" was asked.

"I don't know any more about it than you do," replied Senator Tillman. "All I know is what I've read in the newspapers, and my reading has been mostly confined to the head lines."

When the scene at Sumter between Irby and McLaurin was mentioned, the Senator said he was inclined to believe the incident had been exaggerated. He said, however, that the candidates had for a long time entertained a strong personal antipathy to each other. This antipathy he explained dated to the time, five years ago, when both men were in Washington. At that time Irby was Senator and McLaurin a representative in Congress. Differences arose between them which have never been repaired. The Senator had no opinion to offer as to the outcome of the race.

A soft spot was touched, however, when the tariff question was mentioned and Senator Tillman immediately grew animated.

"I see by the papers that they are going to vote on it to-day."

"Thank God, they've got that far along," he exclaimed with a grim sort of smile.

"I want them to make haste and pass it. I believe it will vomit the country instead of bringing prosperity. I want it to be administered in heroic doses. It is the only way to convince them," and the Senator laughed grimly.

"How do you stand on the Hawaiian question?"

"I am opposed to annexation. We've got enough colored races now to bother us without going out of our way to mix in any more."

Senator Tillman says he does not believe the South Carolina Dispensary is dead.

"We are going to fight Mr. Sinton in Congress and I believe we can stop government by injunction, in the whiskey business any way."

Asked if he intended to work further for a rehearing of the Senatorial investigation in the matter of sugar stock purchases, the Senator said:

"If I get back in time, I am going to ask the Senate to vote on my resolution. That is as much as I can do."

Senator Tillman was asked for an opinion on the status of the Populist party at this time, in reference to the stand recently taken by Tom Watson.

"I have seen some dispatches in the papers on the subject, but I don't know anything about the convention, how many are there, nor what they are doing.

"We have no Populists in South Carolina," he continued, "so, you see, I'm not the man to question."

At this juncture the train seemed about to pull out and the Senator started to get aboard. He goes straight to Clemson College, in South Carolina, to attend a meeting of the board of trustees, at which a president is to be elected. He will stop over at his home in Trenton and expects to reach Washington on Saturday or Monday.

The Senator carried a dress suit case, labeled "B. R. Tillman, Trenton, S. C." Whether the case contained a spike-tailed coat, the abomination of Mr. Baily, of Texas, or is simply used for convenience, was not ascertained.

GIVE IT A FAIRER TRIAL.

A Good Word For The Dispensary System.

Yet in spite of the flagrant abuses which have crept into the management of the Dispensary system, and the unpardonable laxity with which its revenues have been guarded, the experiment in sumptuary legislation begun by the Reform leaders is likely to be continued in South Carolina for several years to come. Though the Dispensary police have not yet succeeded in breaking up the sale of liquor in the "speak-easies" of the larger towns, the traffic has been as a whole put under restrictions which have contributed immensely to public order in the State. Popular sentiment had become more or less dulled to the abridgment of personal liberty involved in the State's suppression of liquor traffic by individuals; while the safeguards thrown about the sale and consumption of intoxicants under the new system have fully justified themselves, apparently, to the intelligent and thoughtful of all classes and parties in the State. In addition, the revenues of South Carolina have been increased by over $300,000 in the three or more years since the Dispensary legislation went into effect. Though discredited by its associations and the follies and weaknesses of its administrators, the South Carolina solution of the liquor problem deserves to have and should have a longer and a fairer trial before it is dismissed as another fruitless and fantastic social experiment.—New York Tribune.

PRANKS OF LIGHTNING.

Extraordinary Phenomena In North Carolina.

Charlotte, N. C., July 14.—During a thunderstorm a bolt of lightning cut some queer capers at the suburban home of Mr. A. R. Logie, two miles east of Charlotte.

Mrs. Logie was in the house with the children and Mr. Logie was in the barn entertaining a farmer friend who had dropped in for shelter from the storm. All at once almost everybody on the place was knocked over. Lightning had struck a tall cedar tree in front of Mr. Logie's residence, and when those in the house were able to make an investigation, some curious results were found.

The tree was split open and set in a blaze by the lightning, and two squirrels and six sparrows that had their homes in the tree were killed. The bolt entered the ground at the foot of the tree, ran under the sidewalk, emerged at the steps of the front porch, entered the house under the front door, made a zig-zag course through two rooms, then went out of a window and made for the barn. It hit Mr. Logie and the farmer, and the latter, not having a clear idea of the situation, got upon his feet and advanced threateningly upon his host. "What did you hit me for?" he wanted to know. Mr. Logie made a hasty explanation and saved himself.

Mrs. Logie and the children were knocked from their feet and stunned, and it was sometime before their recovery.

The only damage done was the shattering of a valuable collection of old china in one of the rooms of the house.

Woman's Diseases

Are as peculiar as unavoidable, and cannot be discussed or treated as we do those to which the entire human family are subject. Menstruation sustains such important relations to her health, that when Suppressed, Irregular or Painful, she soon becomes languid, nervous and irritable, the bloom leaves her cheek and very grave complications arise unless Regularity and Vigor are restored to these organs.

Bradfield's Female Regulator Is a receipt of one of the most noted physicians of the South, where troubles of this sort prevail more extensively than in any other section, and has never failed to correct disordered Menstruation. It restores health and strength to the suffering woman.

"We have for the past thirty years handled Bradfield's Female Regulator, both at wholesale and retail, and in no instance has it failed to give satisfaction. We sell more of it than all other similar remedies combined."
