

To Dance in the State House.

The custom of holding the State ball in the State house which was discontinued in 1890, is to be resumed this fall. The legislature at its last session adopted a just resolution providing for such an arrangement. The legislature had the legal right to pass such a resolution, but they have the same right to allow the State house used for any other purpose, and by any other people in the State.

A Magnificent Store in Chester.

On to day, September 15th, R. Brandt will celebrate his second annual opening. Mr. Brandt just recently returned from a two weeks stay in New York, where he selected a very choice stock. Having been employed on Maiden Lane, the jewelry centre of the world, for nearly four years, he naturally understands the market there better than any other jeweler in the State, unless they have had the same advantages.

An immense stock of elegant and costly wares, all new and of the latest patterns, together with an entire new outfit of 32 feet of the finest French Plate Glass Show cases go to make the display this year by far surpass that of '96.

All are invited and we hope to welcome all our friends and customers from far and near at the store on that day especially.

Most Respectfully,
R. BRANDT'S Jewelry Store.

DOING SPLENDID WORK.

General Freight Agent Lumpkin, of the Ohio River and Charleston Railroad, Helping Charleston while Helping his Road.

Mr. S. B. Lumpkin, general freight and passenger agent of the Ohio River and Charleston Railroad, was in the city yesterday and to-day goes to Columbia to be present at a meeting of the railroad commissioners. Mr. Lumpkin was in Charleston in the interests of his road and when accosted by a Reporter for The News and Courier said that his visit had been entirely successful and that everything was now working for the best interests of all concerned.

"From the arrangement now existing with the South Carolina and Georgia Railroad," said Mr. Lumpkin, "passengers from Charleston may go to the farthest point on the Ohio River and Charleston Railroad by daylight. I mean by starting at 7.10 A. M. they may reach Marion, N. C. about 7.30 P. M. the same day. There is to be no more stopping over on the way and breaking up two days in getting to the upper points of the road. It will be the same way on the return. Passengers will leave Marion at 8 A. M. and reach Charleston at 8 o'clock the same evening.

"This arrangement will be much appreciated by Charleston merchants, for it will enable their salesmen to go into this territory without such a loss of time as has been heretofore necessary.

"The freight rates from and to Charleston have been considerably reduced. The markets of Charleston are now put in a position to do the business of that territory. Good schedules are in effect on freights also and quick through deliveries will be made.

"The up country merchants seem delighted with the prospect of convenient schedules of passenger service. (This, however, will not be in operation until October 1.) The people say that this will give Charleston the trade that naturally belongs to her.

"I am sure," said Mr. Lumpkin, in conclusion, "that Charleston has not had such an opportunity of securing the up country trade since the war. The arrangements we have made will certainly place all the territory of the Ohio River and Charleston Railroad within close touch with Charleston, their natural port."
