Agricultural Clubs, Granges and Alliances.

Nothing contributes more effectually to the improvement and development of any industry than organization of those engaged in it for social, educational and economic benefit of its members. It matters little under what name or organic law such bodies are associated, provided the objects are laudable and legitimate -laudable in that the purpose of the organization be to promote social culture and community of feeling amongst neighbors; the increase of the individual and aggregate intelligence of its members, and through and together with these, the promotion of the success and financial prosperity of the industry-legitimate, in that its purposes look not to the aggrandizement of one class, nor to the diversion of the energies and thoughts of its members from the promotion of the industry to propagandism of political platforms or the partisan elevation of its own members to political office.

These diversions have destroyed the usefulness of agricultural organzations in every civilized country. If we will make a careful, retrospective analysis of the agncies of progress in the agricultural industry of this country, we will find that nearly all substantial progress may be traced to the work of organizations, either voluntary, State or Federal, while the elevation to office of men who show ability in the work of these organizations is logical and natural, when they are promoted on their merit, and not as a partizan either of the organization or the industry. It is simply the selection of the fittest on account of knowledge of such fitness acquired association and opportunity hereby afforded for observation. Even then the promotion should not be on account of membership, nor as a member of an industrial organization, but simply as an intelligent, competent citizen.

The most efficient organization we have ever known consists of twelve members - just enough to meet on the farm of each member once every year.

The atmosphere of cities and The Auditor will attend the followtowns is especially unhealthy for agricultural organizations every character. If the meetings are held at the homes of the members the social feature is emphasized, the business is conducted in an agricultural atmosphere under the conservative influence of the rural home; the expense of a hall in which to meet is dispensed with. The assembling of one's neighbors on his farm in an organized capacity stimulates him and his labors to the exercise of a laudable pride in having roads, crops, stock, gates and fences in condition for inspection. Each member has opportunity of observing the methods and practice of every other member, and thus

The Southern Railway and its connections (the A. & W. P., L. & N. and Southern Pacific) have inaugurated a Tourist Sleeping Car Line between Washington and San Francisco, via Atlanta, New Orleans, and Los Angeles. This sleeping car goes through without change, leaving Washington every Saturday morning at 11:15, and is accompanied by a Personal Conductor and Pullman porter, who go through. The Puliman fare for double berth is $7.00 from Washington to San Francisco.

This service is especially for the convenience of the parties holding second-class tickets, though firstclass tickets are good in the car.
