A Fatal Accident.

On Sunday morning Mrs. GEORGE Poor, of this place, met with a fatal accident from using kerosene oil in kindling a fire. It seems that after breakfast Mrs. Poor, desiring to start a fire in the stove and thinking the coals left from the fire in the morning had entirely died out, placed wood in the stove and poured kerosene oil upon it, when the can exploded and the burning oil was scattered in every direction. With the assistance of her daughter and a few neighbors, who happened to see the explosion, she escaped with severe burns on the face, arms and other parts of the body. Medical assistance was immediately called to her aid, but the skill of the physician was baffled, and she died Monday afternoon about 4 o'clock. The physicianthinks that she breathed the flames. She was a consistent member of the Baptist Church and leaves a sorrow stricken family, her husband, four sons and one daughter.

-If there are any vestiges of sectional spirit remaining in the country says the New York Times, they do not appear to be at the South. Some of the planks of the platform of the Mississippi Democrats have a close resemblance to those of Republican platforms of twenty years ago. They declare first of all "fidelity to the Constitution of the United States" and detailed the constitution of the United States and describe of the constitution of the United States and describe of the constitution of the United States and describe of the constitution of the United States and describe of the constitution of the United States and describe of the constitution of mand the "protection of equal rights for all classes," and "no discrimination on account of race. color, or previous condition of servitude or birthplace." There is scarcely axything in the platform suggestive even of party differences, and the co-operation of all citizens is invited, "without regard to past differences." The spirit of progress is indicated in the pledge for the maintenance of free schools, the encouragement of immigration and the demand for a "prompt, vigorous and impartial administration of the criminal laws."—Co-

Is the Newspaper Business Overdone?

In our view there is as much "overproduction" in the newspaper business as there is in the manufacture of cotton goods. As a rule, of late, (there are some exceptions) as soon as a town at a railroad depot grows large enough to become a "body politic and corporate" a charter is obtained. The next great and indispensable requisite to the life and prosperity of that town—in the opinion of its citizens—is a newspaper. A few type (old and well-worn, perhaps.) and a second-hand press are procured. The paper is "started." It makes its appearance with one side reasonably well printed; the other, maculed and blurred, and scarcely readable. Upon inquiry it is ascertained that the readable, better-printed side of the paper is printed somewhere else than at home—or at any rate not at said railroad station. In other words, half the paper, or what is known as the "patent outside," is printed in the sweet land of Yankeedom, or by some fellow, similar enterprising, at home, who takes his cue therefrom. Little or nothing of a local nature is recognized in the "patent outside," and, for the reason already stated, what little may be in the home-printed side can scarcely be read. The effect is that those who only a few weeks previous were so anxious for a paper to be "started" have some very decided apprehensions that they have been pretty badly "sold." The result is, after a few weeks, or possibly months of miscrable existence, the little "mongrel turns up its toes." It is dead. And somebody, with more enthusiasm than either gadgment or experience, is minus a few hundred dolars.

This is one feature of over-production in the newspaper business. Another feature is the multiplicity or excess of ewspapers business. Another feature is the multiplicity or excess of evspapers mony nublished. Two news-in the newspaper business. Another feature is the multiplicity or excess of ewspapers now published. Two newspapers, in the same County may not be oo many—owing in a great measure, of course, to the population, and the complex ion and intelligence of of the inhabitants. Not more than one-third of the white voting population, on an average, are bona fide subscribers to the county paper, where only one is printed. Where there are two or more published, this proportion is necessarily lessened, as a very small per cent, of the population of any County outside of towns or villages,, support more than one local newspaper. Hence, we take it that where more than two newspapers are published in a County with a population of less than three thousand white voters there is an excess of at least one paper, and consequently an over-production to that extent.—Laureusville Herald.

-An astounding bank robbery has just been reported from St Petersburg. The plundered institution is the State Bank of Russia and the amount or the robbery is 220,000 roubles, or $143,000. This amount was taken bodily out of the vaults of the bank between two days, but the vaults were found securely locked on the morning of the discovery, and there was no evidence of violence or burglary. It was plainly not a case of defalcation, for the books showed no false entries. A careful inquiry has shown that the robbery was committed by a party of minor employees of the bank who had no right of access to the vaults, but who had become thoroughly familiar with the routine of the institution, and thus were enabled to concoct a plan by which one of sheir number was locked in the vault at ihe close of business hours and released during the night by his conrederates. Before they were able to penetrate to the treasure vaults, the conspirators had to forge the signatures of forty high officials of the bank. The chief criminal has fled, and there is no probability of recovering much of the stolen money.

Beware of Dogs.

The 19th instant while Rev. Vashtine Herlong was preaching at Bethany Church, Edgefild County, a dog that had followed its owner took a fit in church. The congregation concluded at once the dog was mad; and the death from hy-drophobia in the neighborhood a few days before made them the The first bale of new crop cotton was put on the market here, on the 25th inst, and was bought by McCrary & Ferguson on private terms. It was from the farm and was bought by McCrary & Ferguson on private terms. It was from the farm of Mr. A. C. Copeland, who is one of our most progressive young farmers, and has managed by some hook or crook, but mainly by pluck and work, to have in the first bale of for several seasons past.

Mr. M. S. Bailey has put in a new Pratt eighty-saw gin, so that he now runs one hundred and forty saws, with a capacity of twenty to thirty bales a day. Mr. Bailey is Investing a good deal of his money in machinery. He has three steam engines in a row, one press, and men and women climbed on and over benches with an agility that was astonishing. The preacher called out from the pulpit, "Won't somebody give me a pistol?" Won't somebody give me a pistol?" But no pistol was produced—although it was in Edgefield County. A gentleman in the congregation had a pistol, but he would not produce it, for fear some good brother might have him up for carrying concealed weapons. Partial order was finally restored, and the preacher concluded his sermon to a demoralized congregation.

Mr. Edward Atkinson, the statistician, in a recent address to the wool growers, said: "If the cur dog was not stronger than the average Legislature, you could raise all the wool we make and import." But you have not gumption enough to muzzle your cur dogs. We have to protect our wool growers from the pauper wool of foreign countries, and cannot muzzle our dogs. There is no question about the baneful influence of the dog on sheep —Mr. J. H. Clark, of sherly, Covington County, Allbama, is the strongest man, physically in that State. He can take a 250 pound anvil, and, by placing his thumb in the mason hole, throw it off like a marble, and to handle two stout men at a time is child's play.
