FOREST SERVICE ITEMS

To the camper, sportsman, and seeker after health, rest and recreation, the National Forests offer unrivaled opportunities for outdoor life and enjoyment. The popularity of these great mountain playgrounds is evidenced by the fact that millions of people visit them each year. In recent years the number of visitors to the National Forests has annually exceeded 30,000,000.

Roads and trails, marked by signs, make the forests reasonably accessible. There are countless secluded spots along the banks of streams and lakes where the camper may pitch his tent. Camping is free and generally requires no permit.

In localities frequented by large numbers of people free public camp grounds are established and water developments, fireplaces, and comfort stations constructed for the convenience of visitors as fast as the funds available permit.

The National Forests are the home of much of the country's big game, and there are many excellent trout streams and lakes, frequently restocked with young fish, which offer keen sport to the angler. In general, the only restrictions on hunting and fishing are those imposed by the fish and game laws of the states in which forests are located, and all that is asked of the visitor is that he look to the proper sanitation of his camp and be careful with fire.

THERE ALL THE TIME

Columbia—Diligent sleuthing was rewarded today and policeman D. E. McCravy of the Columbia force hailed a negro defendant into court on a charge of stealing a pair of shoes six weeks ago.

"I've been trying to find this fellow for more than a month," McCravy explained to recorder Heyward Brockinton. Since the theft, the officer said, he had searched constantly and regularly checked the man's known haunts.

Jailer M. P. Kramar eyed the prisoner and explained to McCravy.

"You could have found this fellow if you'd looked in the right place," he said. "I've had him in jail for the last month. He just got out a few days ago."

NOTICE

The City Board of Health has decided, in order to carry out the Standard milk ordinance and acquaint the public with the grade milk they are buying from the dairies who supply them, by publishing the monthly reports made by the Hygienic laboratory of the State Board of Health, Columbia, S. ### RESOLUTIONS

"There is no death—an angel form Walks o'er the earth, with silent tread; He bears our best-loved things away, And we call them dead."

And ever near us, though unseen, The dear immortal spirits tread; For all the boundless universe Is life—there are no dead.

On October 6th, 1937, the gentle spirit of Miss Margaret Farrow was called up higher to that "Land that is fairer than day" and this afternoon, the Parent Teachers' association of Boundary street school, of Newberry, S. C., of which she was a faithful teacher for ten years, pauses to pay a tribute of love and appreciation of her beautiful and useful life while with us and our deep sorrow in her passing. The service which she has rendered will always live in the minds and hearts of the little children who came within the sphere of her influence and teaching and we, as mothers and fellow teachers, will ever hold her in tenderest memory.

Therefore be it resolved:
I. That in the death of Miss Margaret Farrow, we realize we have lost a most loyal co-worker but we bow to the will of our Heavenly father, realizing that "Death robs the living, not the dead."

II. That we extend to her bereaved mother and other loved ones, our deepest sympathy in their great sorrow.

III. That a page in our Minute Book be inscribed in her memory and a copy of these resolutions be sent to her family, and printed in the county papers.
"She has fallen asleep—the victory's won, Love's offering made, life's suffering done. How sweet her rest, while angels keep Watch o'er our loved one's quiet sleep."
—P.T.A. Boundary Street School
