If you can keep your nerve when all about you
The pessimists are spreading doubt and fear;
If you can persevere despite depression near;
If you can work ahead and keep your counsel
While politicians shout and tell you what to do;
If you can face your task with resolution
And bring to bear the greatest powers in you;
If you can sleep and not indulge in nightmare,
Dream peacefully and make your dreams come true;
If you can listen patiently to critics

And practice golden silence as your cue;
If you can hear the wicked lies about you
And treat them one and all with proud disdain;
If you can bear a load of vicious slander
And not give way beneath the awful strain;
If you can talk to crowds and not get angry;
Or bitterly retort when they cry "Boo!"
If you can face the foe and keep on smiling,
When papers and cartoonists libel you;
If you can fill the ever fleeting minute
With unremitting toil and think it fun;
You're heading for success my fellow-toiler,
And—what is more—you'll be a paragon!

—GRENVILLE KLEISER.

FOREST SERVICE NEWS

Planting, one of the most interesting phases of Forest Service activity, is a project of more than ordinary importance and magnitude on the Enoree District. Plans now being formulated call for the planting of a half million trees next spring—trees enough to furnish one to every fourth person in South Carolina!

Nature often sows several million seed to grow a hundred mature trees. The forester cannot be so prodigal. He must substitute knowledge of what, where, when and how to sow the plant. Further, the forester can improve on natural methods by careful selection of parent trees and by genetical crosses of desirable species. No plantations, for this reason, are established within a hundred yards of a seed tree. The transplanted nursery stock carefully selected and studied as its fine livestock, must be guarded against the introduction of less vigorous and less hardy strains.

Bulk of seedlings now in the beds of the Enoree Nursery, located along Highway No. 176, joining CCC Camp F-6 on the north, is comprised of loblolly pine, greatly desirable for checking erosion and for reproduction. Black locust seedlings also will be extensively used in erosion work. Other products of the nursery are mimosa and slash pine, with plans for the future including wildlife feed and cover crops for propagation on the Enoree Game Management Areas.

The nursery stock to be set out next spring necessitates, with 8' X 6' spacing, a total of approximately four hundred acres, which, with planting at high efficiency, will require a crew of twenty men every day for an entire month!

The present capacity of the Enoree Nursery, a million seedlings, will possibly be increased by fifty per cent in 1938 to cope with demands of needed reforestation on this National Forest and others.

Christmas is drawing near. Guess everyone has baked their first fruit cakes. Then ladies have been quite busy cleaning and decorating their houses. The decorating of trees with electric lights seems to be increasing. I heard a lady say that she never dreamed that her house would ever be decorated with electricity. I have seen several decorated, all are very beautiful. I don't like to show partiality but I do think that my niece Ruby Ruff has the prettiest.

Well here is a question. Which shows the most Christmas Spirit? "The one who gives a gift or the receiver?" The giver always shows the most spirit, but if each gives a present they both have the yuletide spirit in their heart. I once heard a young minister say that he had put a beautiful work basket on a Christmas tree for a young lady. After the exercises were over she came and asked him if he had given it as just a sweetheart or as a friend. She said if it was given as a sweetheart he could take it back but he told her just to keep it.

This is proof that each party doesn't always have the spirit toward each other. While in some cases they do, in others they differ. It has been predicted a warmer Christmas than we have had for several years. I hope this is true. Wishing all a Merry Christmas and trusting we will all have a grand time.

LET'S GO SHOPPING

Now that you have the majority of your gifts bought and wrapped in the unusually bright and colorful papers and ribbons sold this year, your thoughts are probably turning to the Christmas dinner. Be your family large or small, something special must be prepared. Notice Clarence T. Summer's grocery ad in this issue. Get a piece of paper and begin now to make out that list for a very special dinner and for a very special price. Clarence T. Summer figures that your Christmas meals need not cost any more than everyday meals.

Perhaps you may not be planning to buy a new car just at this season, but it doesn't hurt one bit to window shop I've found. In passing by Davis Motor Company, my eye was caught by the unusual and unique seasonal decorations of the display floor of Davis'. I understand the credit all goes to Mrs. Willie Mayer. Big red cellophane bows and holly decorate each of the new '38 Chevroleats and Buicks on the floor. In the window are placed two prettily decorated Christmas trees on either side of a toy car that any small boy would envy.

Whether preparing to fill the children's stockings or arrange the Christmas table, a store of fruits, nuts and candies must always be ready. Why not shop for the Christmas necessities at J. Claud Senn's grocery store. There you will find a special price on such things and with the savings you can buy that almost forgotten Christmas gift.

In this Christmas issue of the Sun you will find merry greeting cards from your merchant and your county officials. They have appreciated your support in the past, and will continue to do so. Show these merchants your appreciation for their service by doing all of your shopping in the "City Of Friendly Folks."

LIONS CLUB MEETING

President James C. Kinard was the principal speaker at the Christmas meeting of the Lions Club Tuesday evening at the Newberry Hotel. A turkey supper was served at this regular gathering.
