TUBERCULIN TESTS MADE IN COLORED SCHOOLS

Blanche Sowell, colored nurse from the South Carolina Tuberculosis Association spent two months recently working, with the colored people of Newberry County under the direction of the Local Health Department. 23 schools were visited in which health talks were made. Tuberculin tests were made in those schools where there were known contacts. Homes in which there were active cases or where cases had been, were visited and those contacts tuberculin tested. During this period five hundred fifty-nine (559) tuberculin tests were made in schools and homes—about 34 per cent of this number were positive reactors. At two clinics twenty-six (26) X-rays of chests were made with the following findings: four (4) cases of pulmonary tuberculosis, three (3) suspects, three (3) childhood type tuberculosis, and one bronchitis. Two patients were admitted to the South Carolina Sanatorium and applications filed for others. Lectures were made in the colored C C C camp and to groups of parents whose children reacted positively to the test and they were given health rules to have the children live by.

The county Health Department feels that Nurse Sowell accomplished a great deal of good while in Newberry county. This work was made possible by the Local Christmas Seal Sale.

Tenor Is First of Guest Artists to Appear Here

Ernest McChesney, tenor, will be heard at the first concert of the season, presented by the Co-operative Concert Association, Thursday evening, January 13, at the Newberry high school auditorium. Tickets for the series of concerts may still be obtained from Miss Rose Hamm.

Following is a brief review of the life of the American tenor:

Ernest McChesney will remember that tour to his dying day. A cold winter and one-night stands and trains and trains and trains! Every morning at 6 a. m. it happened. A stout vigorous hand would tug at the green curtains of his pullman sleeper and a warm hearty voice with the German accent it never lost would sing out: "Young tenor, time to get up!"

Ernestine Schumann-Heink was a magnificent old trupper and Ernest McChesney's opportunity to tour with her as assisting artist was a turning point in his life. From this great singer this young American learned that a voice is the hardest taskmaster in the world—and the day is never long enough for all there is to study and to do.

Still in his twenties, Ernest McChesney was born in West Orange, N. J., of American parents and ancestry. None of his family had been musicians, but both his father and mother recognized his talent and encouraged him even as a small child.

His career started as a remarkable boy soprano of a church choir at the age of seven. At the same time he began the study of piano and organ, training which later enabled him to win a scholarship at Carteret Academy as chapel pianist. He held this scholarship for five years until he was graduated. Over six feet tall, a natural athlete, it was in the normal course of events that he distinguished himself on the baseball, football and track teams. The only astonishing thing about him was that he sang so well—and seemed to want to sing more than anything else on earth.

In the beginning it was hard. He had to learn and he had to earn. Fortunately, his good looks and engaging personality solved the problem. By day he ground away at scales and songs and repertoire; by night he did whatever opportunity offered. Sometimes it was operetta—"My Maryland," "Princess Charming," "New Moon" . . . One season it was the "Ziegfeld Follies." Another winter found him featured with Sophie Tucker on a bill at the Hollywood Country Club—"Ernest McChesney, Romantic Lyric Tenor!"

Finally the opportunity came. The young artist was engaged to sing the leading role of the Vicomte de Jolidon in Robert Edmond Jones' famous production of "The Merry Widow" at Colorado's Central City Opera House. The cast was headed by Gladys Swarthout and Richard Bonelli.

The Metropolitan Opera baritone watched his youthful colleague—liked not only him but his voice, urged him to concentrate on a serious career. Since then Ernest McChesney has confined his activities exclusively to "good music." Concerts and such oratorio appearances as his engagement this Christmas at Worcester for "The Messiah" occupy his immediate present—opera, he hopes, lies in the future.

Whenever he gets discouraged he looks at the picture Ernestine Schumann-Heink autographed to him with these words: "Young tenor, study hard like Mama Ernestine and you will make a career like her."

SENATE APPROVES SEED LOAN GRANT

Washington, Jan. 5—The Senate approved today a $50,000,000 fund for seed and crop production loans to farmers in 1938.

Chairman Smith of South Carolina of the senate agriculture committee said the loans were identical with those authorized by a similar measure last year, which President Roosevelt had approved.

Loans, under the senate bill introduced by Smith, would be limited to $400, bear 4 per cent interest, and would be made by agencies of the farm credit administration.

LET'S GO . . . SHOPPING

New Year has come and gone, but it's never too late to make resolutions. So resolve—right now to go down to T. Roy Summer's and look over the greatly reduced merchandise of this outstanding men's shop. All suits and coats are reduced 25 per cent and the best brands of shoes may be purchased at such reasonable prices. You'll certainly want to tell the man of the family about this sale and last, but not least, all merchandise other than suits and shoes, have been reduced 20 per cent. "Buy now for future needs."

The largest selling item of jewelry stores just now is the gold cross and chain. Why, it's almost out of fashion to be without one! Turner's Jewelry shop has just received a brand new shipment of crosses and you will want to look them over immediately. Some of the more expensive necklaces of crosses are made with dainty tiny chipped diamonds. Dainty baby crosses are also on display. If you didn't get a cross for Christmas, by all means visit Turner's and select one for yourself or some member of the family while the stock is full.

The newest addition to our fast growing city is the Pure Oil station at the well-known intersection of the Columbia, Greenville, and Whitmore highways. My shopping tour took me out to look over the station and it is a beautiful building with the cleanest of kitchens and rest rooms. The upstairs which is ever so much larger than it looks from the outside was made for an apartment, but J. B. West, the manager, informs me that he plans to turn it into rooms for private parties or dances. A wide space is being cleared about the station for cars to park and in a few months bright tulips will appear on every side. For a short joy ride go out to West's service station for a sandwich and drink as well as to supply your auto with some Pure Oil products.

Up the hill to see what the progressive Smith Motor company is doing since the holidays and to find Bill Smith getting his used cars in a row for a big used car sale. Should you be in line for anything like an auto, I suggest you look over the wide range of cars here before making the final choice. And buying autos or anything else from such congenial fellows as Mr. Smith and his salesmen is a real pleasure.

To see what was playing the first of next week at the theatres, I was delighted to find Samuel Goldwyn's great production, "Dead End", scheduled for Monday and Tuesday at the Opera House. Twenty-four hours of throbbing life in a city street, paved with riches and poverty, comedy and tragedy, romance, and heartaches, thunders across the screen in the picture starring Sylvia Sydney and Joel McCrea and a great cast who portray this powerful human story. It's just the kind of picture that you like to see "for a change."

TAX LEAGUE MEETS WEDNESDAY

The State meeting of the Farmers and Taxpayers League will be held next Wednesday at the Columbia Hotel in Columbia, according to an announcement by J. K. Breedin, managing director. Mr. Breedin is anxious for a full turnout and everyone is invited to the meeting whether a member if the league or not. Mr. Breedin points out in a letter to members that requests of the various institutions of the state this year is for more than three millions of dollars over last year.
