OUT AMONG THE PEOPLE

54TH MILEPOST

Mr. J. H. Summer this week rings up another year—his 54th—as a Newberry merchant. In November 1884 Mr. Summer opened business in the stand presently occupied by Gable's. He recalls as if it were yesterday that on the opening day so long ago his store displayed apples in one window and peanuts in the other. In those days stores opened their doors at 7 in the morning and closed at 9 at night, every day in the year except Sundays. Holiday closings were unknown. The days Mr. Summer has been absent from his store in all those years can be counted on the fingers of one hand and today he runs his business and his health remains good. Time has furrowed his brow but little and we hope to note the passing of many more anniversaries of this beloved gentleman of the old school.

RAMBLING THE RANGE

I promised Will Kinard three or four years ago to come to the Kinard reunion but to date haven't got round to it. Then a few weeks ago I promised him to attend his community fair and when Scrap Hendrix came by and said let's go I went. Scrap thought he was scheduled for a speech but found he was a day early which probably didn't hurt the fair any.

Wilbur Epps was there with his good wife who he says can shoot a gun as good as he can. Shortly Tom Pope and Aubrey Harley rolled up with "Uncle Jodie" Kinard as ballast, so we milled about the place seeing what was to be seen.

Among the exhibits Mr. Kinard had prepared was a beautiful quilt the work of Mrs. Martin, wife of Overseer Martin, of West End. This was an exquisite bit of work, entirely beautiful. Then there was a quilt top made by the mother of Cole L. Bleese, according to the note attached. In a corner stood six flint-and-steel muskets such as used in the civil war. They were identical and Mr. Kinard said they were used by the six Havid brothers in that war, all of whom lived to bring their guns home.

There were other exhibits here and there and while we have seen more elaborate fairs the attempt was not bad for a starter.

Shortly before we sat down to fold under our belts some very good hash trimmings, a gentleman dashed up with the news that a Negro had entered the home of a woman who was alone about a mile up the road. Tom, Aubrey, Wilbur, Scrap, and your servant gathered up all the available artillery on the premises (except the civil war guns) and headed for the scene. Arriving there we found the woman standing in the yard shivering and wringing her hands. Tom stationed himself at the front door with a single barrel shot gun, the barrel of which was held to the stock with a strip of adhesive tape, ready to make hash out of the black boy's nappy head if he stuck it out that way. Wilbur and Aubrey, one or the other with Mr. Kinard's revolver, entered the house from the rear while Scrap and your servant guarded the woman. A thorough search of the house revealed that no one had entered, or if so had fled to the woods close behind the house before our arrival. Tom said he heard a "squeek" in one of the front rooms which turned out to be only a mouse daring him to shoot that taped up shotgun.

After Wilbur had put a shell into the shotgun and instructed the lady in the use of it we loaded our munitions and headed back for the fair grounds.

It turned out that the man who brought the news of the alleged home-entry was a son-in-law of the woman he left in peril while he sought braver souls to oust the Negro. "He said he wouldn't go in that house for nothing in the world" said the mother-in-law. "He was the scariest man I ever saw."

The son-in-law explained that he couldn't go back with us as he was long past due at his work but said it would be OK by him for us to "shoot hell out of that Negro."

It was altogether exciting and not without an element of danger. The way Tom and Aubrey and Wilbur hopped out of the car and went after that Negro was a beautiful thing to see, and the way your servant and Scrap guarded the woman was a clever piece of work. Old Hub Quatibaum would have looked like a Boy Scout in that scene.

LOVE ME, LOVE MY DOG

Blind Senator Vest once wrote a beautiful tribute to the dog. I do not have it at hand but the case he made out for the dog was one of slavish loyalty to his master. Man may be deserted by wife, children, friends, not never by his dog. He is faithful throughout life and the last scene finds him, paws upon his master's grave, his head buried in grief. In such manner this blind lover of the canine described the dog, and it is for this loyalty no doubt that man has ever been willing to fight and die for his dog.

It has been a long, long time since I had the occasion to "cover" a dogfight trial, and the announcement a few days ago that one of the village's policemen had brought charges against a merchant because of a cur fracas brought back memories of early newspapering when dog fights furnished much good reading.

It seems that Policeman Warren and merchant Golinski, who are neighbors, have dogs that don't exactly like each other. Golinski's is a Bull dog and Warren's, according to Attorney Pope, is "an old lanky bird dog who goes around poking his snoot in people's garbage cans where he has no business."

Anyway the Warren and Golinski pups mixed it up furiously a few days ago and Mr. Warren had Mr. Golinski appear in Recorder's court to answer for his dog. According to the evidence the dogs fought about over the Golinski premises and finally got under the Warren house. Mrs. Warren, who was in court, testified that Mr. Golinski asked her to crawl under the house and get her dog. Mr. Golinski said the lady must have misunderstood him as he asked her to "call" her dog—not "crawl" under the house for him.

Attorney Pope, appearing for Mr. Golinski, said nothing would have been heard from the incident had the Golinski dog not "jumped on a policeman's dog and beat him up." He also said the case would never have seen the light of day had Mr. Warren's dog done the beating. This Mr. Warren denied, stating the police had had other complaint against the Bull pup.

Jeff Smith Deposes

—and said, that on or about last year some time he was pushing along astride his own dogs in the vicinity of the Golinski household when the Bull rushed out and grabbed him by the leg and taking out a hunk—a tiny hunk. Jeff said his acquaintance with that dog ceased then and there. He changed his route. Several other witnesses testified as to the lovable or vicious nature of the two dogs, among them Barber Son, who said that upon one occasion his wife fired his shotgun to scare the Golinski dog away. Mr. Son was also nipped by the Bull but came through anatomically complete, if mentally flabbergasted.

The jury panel of Mr. Golinski's peers, by which Blackstone says he must be tried, was headed up by that sterling citizen Professor T. E. Epting who closed his French book, leaving his pupils stranded somewhere between the Arch de Triomphe and the Eiffel tower (or is it one and the same) and hastened forth to sit in judgement upon such as would be judged. Even Attorney Pope's facetious sallies which fetched giggles, and sniggers and nudges from the spectators failed to register on the stern countenance of the jury foreman.

Summing up for the jury Mr. Pope said it really was a shame to call six men good and true from their work to sit in judgement upon a dog case. He hinted that the pages of time had been leafed in reverse and that we were sitting astraddle of medieval if not the stone age. However, an advocate's duty was a duty regardless and he would proceed to show the gentlemen so unjustly detained for their work why and where his client was guiltless. That he did this passively well is reflected in the verdict, announced in stentorian, yet withal resonant words by the foreman—
"Not Guilty!"

Newberry Heroine Honored Sunday

A large number of people from Greenville, Chester, Clinton, Newberry and surrounding towns and from the rural areas gathered at the Bush River church Sunday afternoon, November 13, to pay honor to the memory of Mrs. Mary Golding Leonard Cole, a Revolutionary heroine of the Hays' Station massacre, in which she lost her husband, Locklin Leonard.

A number of descendants of Mrs. Cole were present. On the wall of the church is a plaque to her memory.

Mrs. Cole and Locklin Leonard came to this country from Virginia with their parents and were married soon after settling here, living near Bush River church until the death of Mr. Leonard in the massacre. Mrs. Cole and a slave girl hunted for and found Leonard's body among the bloody ruins of Hays station which was near the Belfast road in this county. They brought it home on a sled and prepared it for burial, dug the grave, and laid his remains to rest.

A few years after the death of her husband Mrs. Leonard married Rev. John Cole who was a man of piety and fine character and who was pastor of Bush River church. For 35 years they lived and labored at Bush River. When Mr. Cole passed away Mrs. Cole went to live with her grand-daughter near Hurricane church in Laurens county. She lived to be 82 years of age. The Rev. C. T. Squires of Greenville who married one of the Cole descendants, presided over the services Sunday.

Armistice Celebration Lure For Throng

Hundreds of persons lined the streets of the city Friday at noon for the big parade which opened the Armistice Day celebration sponsored by the American Legion, Post 24.

The parade, one of the largest ever held in this county, was led by the Newberry Mill Band. Marching behind the 30-piece band to the stirring war-time tunes were 200 World War veterans led by Sheriff Tom Fellers, acting as marshal, and D. W. A. Neville, chairman of the local Red Cross chapter. Next in line was the official car in which rode Mrs. James Stewart, president of the American Legion Auxiliary, and Professor O. B. Cannon and Dr. S. J. Derrick, the two remaining members of the Newberry county War Board of 1917-18. About 2,000 school children including a large number of Boy Scouts were last in line of the large group that marched down Main street and stopped before the old court house to hear brief addresses by Professor Cannon and Dr. Derrick.

At one o'clock in the afternoon, a turkey dinner was served to about 250 ex-service men and specially invited guests. The outstanding speaker at the banquet was Harry M. ### AAA ACREAGE SET AT 275 MILLION

Cotton Goal is 29,000,000 Compared to Normal of 40,000,000

Washington, Nov. 15.—American farmers must plant no more than 275,000,000 of their 365,000,000 cultivated acres to cotton, corn, wheat, tobacco, rice and other "soil depleting" crops next year if they are to obtain $712,000,000 in subsidy payments authorized by congress.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace established this national planting goal today for the 1939 agricultural adjustment programs, designed to prevent accumulation of crop surpluses. This year's goal was about 282,500,000 acres.

The secretary said 275,000,000 acres should produce sufficient crops to supply the nation's domestic requirements and "all possible export markets" and provide an adequate market.

The 1939 goal will be divided among various crops and then allotted to farmers. Growers may comply with, or ignore, their allotments, but in order to be eligible for maximum subsidy payments they must comply. In addition, they must plant land diverted from soil-depleting crops to those classed as soil-building, such as clover, alfalfa, other legumes and pasture crops.

Except for wheat, peanuts and certain types of tobacco, the planting goals for major crops will be about the same this year. The wheat goal was established at 55,000,000 acres compared with 62,500,000 last year. The large reduction was made because of this year's surplus-producing crop, harvested from a seeded acreage of 80,000,000.

The cotton goal was fixed at between 27,000,000 and 29,000,000 acres compared with a normal cotton acreage of about 40,000,000. There is a near-record surplus of cotton.

Slight increases in peanut and flue-cured tobacco acreage goals were established.

The department's planting program may be supplemented by marketing regulations under which growers will be assessed penalty taxes if they sell in excess of individual quotas. Cotton, tobacco, and rice growers will vote December 10 on a proposal to invoke these regulations. They must be approved by two-thirds of those voting before they can be established.

DOWN MEMORY LANE

20 YEARS AGO

The prophetic words weaved in the spider's web as related some time ago by Deputy Sheriff Dorroh came true.

After a while, where are they going to put all the automobiles gathering in town?

Washington, Nov. 16.—Movement of the American troops across the Atlantic has stopped entirely and demobilization of troops in the cantonments and camps at home is under way, according to an announcement made today by General March, chief of staff. He said orders already issued would send 200,000 men back to civil life within two weeks and that when the program was in full swing about 30,000 would quit the army daily.

Paris, Nov. 14.—The general feeling of the associated governments is that Versailles, Paris, is the most convenient place to hold the peace conference, and if this were decided upon, it would also serve as a recognition of the paramount position of France in the war. Besides outlining the general program of the congress, the question of meeting the food situation in Germany and Austria will be considered.

A lady in this community, who is one of the best women in the city, won three turkeys for Thanksgiving. She made the bet that the war would end before Thanksgiving Day. She made the bet a good while ago and stuck to it in the face of strong arguments to the contrary.

BULLDOGS MEET UNION HERE FRIDAY AFTERNOON

The Newberry high school Bulldogs meet the strong Union high team here Friday afternoon at 3:30 on the high school field.

It's home coming day for all old grads and a big turn-out is expected. The Freshman team, coached by Carl Ringer will put on a game between the halves as an added attraction. The kids are pepped up—they are small, but they have the spirit.

Union is a class A school and the game should be the outstanding game of the season as quite a bit of rivalry exists between the two schools.

The line-up will be as follows, showing the Bulldogs to be in top shape: Brother Huffman and Sweetie Carpenter, ends; Capt. Goggans and Keit Purcell, tackles; Co-Capt. Bodie and Bobbie Parks, guards; Connelly, center; Foutsie Clark, fb; Joe Taylor, hb; Ducky Duncan, hb.
