Tiller of the S. C. State Commission of Forestry. This annual contest encourages the towerman to develop a complete live-at-home program and to improve and develop the small areas of state-owned land on which they live. Modest prizes are given the towermen who have the best grass, neatest and cleanest lawns and houses, who do the most to improve conditions and appearances and who do the best job as towermen.

Soil Conservation Permits To Build

By E. E. Epting Wm. Ballentine of Jalapa and Havard Bros. of Silverstreet have recently mowed their pastures. This practice reduces competition from weeds and undesirable grasses and results in increased grazing for livestock. Milton Boland of Pomaria recently cut and baled four tons of hay from three acres of alfalfa. This was the second cutting this spring. The alfalfa was seeded last fall. Kudzu is being grazed by dairy cattle of Parr Bros farm along the Greenville Highway. Along the Chappells highway P. T. Harris is grazing his dairy cattle on sericea. These dairymen and their cattle welcome these perennial plants since annual graze crops will not be ready again until fall.

Parr Elected To Order of W and R

James N. Parr, a member of the senior class at the University of South Carolina School of Law has been elected a member of the Order of Wig and Robe, an honorary scholastic organization at the University.
