EIGHT MILLION SURPLUS SEEN

Washington, Nov. 2.—Eight Carolina agricultural leaders are here for the annual agricultural outlook conference sponsored by the Department of Agriculture. Frank Jeter of Raleigh is the Tar Heel delegate while South Carolina has seven representatives at the meeting. They are: J. F. Miles, M. C. Racheater, M. H. Sutherland, P. S. Williamson, J. T. Lazar, L. E. Massey and A. H. Ward, all from Clemson College.

The delegates today heard Joe Miller, agriculture official declare that the short term outlook for cotton is not too encouraging in light of this years crop, but he painted a more optimistic picture for cotton textile mills.

Miller predicted a carry-over at the end of the current season of more than eight million bales, which is more cotton than domestic mills consumed last season and nearly twice as much as was exported.

Under the marketing quotas proclaimed for next year the national acreage allotment is set at a minimum figure of 21 million acres. This is only 80 per cent as much as was planted to cotton this year.

Miller told the agricultural leaders, who are here from every state in the Union that more cotton has been produced in each of the last three years than has been used for domestic consequently, the supply has been increasing each season.

Miller said in the current season the United States supply of cotton is expected to be more than 20 million bales, nearly three million more than last year. The supply will consist of the carry over of nearly 5.3 million bales, the 1949 crop which was estimated October 1, at more than 15 million bales and imports of some 200,000.

The department official emphasized that any estimate made now of the total demand or disappearances of U. S. cotton in 1949-50 is subject to revision. The ECA cotton program in 1950, on which exports largely depend is not known yet. The effect of devaluation of both domestic mill consumption and exports is still uncertain.

The fifty technicians and farmers assembled in the Newberry County Court House where J. T. Cook of the John Deere Branch office in Atlanta, Robert Smith of the Allis-Chalmers branch in Charlotte and Jake Wheeler, district representative for Case Implement Co. of Atlanta. These men, by the use of charts and slides, showed the various adjustments for the several makes of machines represented.

The afternoon field meeting was held on the farm of T. B. Amis where combines of the three cooperating dealers harvested sericea seed. The entire group assembled around each machine where the manufacturer's specialist actually made necessary adjustments to suit local conditions, and explained how these adjustments affect the amount and cleanness of the seed harvested.
