HOT AIR COSTLY

COLUMBIA, May 2.—Although the $1,000 salaries of members of the General Assembly have been paid the prolonged legislative session is still costing the taxpayers $10,423 per week.

SALARIES of attaches of the Legislature and Legislative Council amount to $9,000 a week and the travel of legislators five cents per mile per week—reach a total of $1,423 a week, records in the Comptroller General's office show.

Checks covering travel of members of the Legislature are issued every two weeks, amounting to $748.80 for the Senate or $374.40 per week and $2,098.50 for the House or $1,049.25 a week.

A Supreme Court decision of 1948 prohibits the lawmakers from appropriating extra pay or extra expenses so members attending the session now are doing so on their own.

Some legislators receive as much as $14 per week in travel, almost enough to cover hotel and living expenses while in Columbia for the two-day period.

DURING THE regular 40-day legislative session, the lawmakers receive $100 a week but remain in session only three days each week. Fridays are devoted to local and uncontested sessions.

MOTHER

My mother lived her days with quiet grace,
For kind she was to every living thing.
The changing seasons, summer, winter, spring,
Brought some new added goodness to her face.
Her patience and her wisdom strangely last:
The calm, sweet voice she had; the way her hand
Would cool my brow; her will to understand;
These now outline a pattern from the past.
Her hands were ever busy with the seam;
Or bending over flower beds with care.
She brought forth beauty to some spot long bare
And thus her years passed gently as a dream.
Time's moving shuttle weaves a skillful art
In drawing Mother closer to my heart.

Church Upheld In Firing Members

Atlanta, Ga., May 9.—A South Georgia Primitive Baptist church has decided that belief in labor unions is "contrary to the example of Christ." So, two church members who disagreed were expelled.

The two, J. B. Stewart and Miss Christeen Stewart, appealing their ouster all the way to the Georgia Supreme court, said they loved the rustic old line Primitive Baptist church at Lyons, Georgia.

They said the church is "the very heart and center" of their lives. They had been members for 10 years.

The Stewarts said they are not union members, but simply believe a church member has a right to join a union if he likes.

But the court refused to set aside the ouster. The seven justices ruled unanimously that the church has full power to decide such questions itself, whether the decision "appears to be right or wrong."

That was the argument of attorneys for the church. They told the court if a majority of the church has determined—even perchance erroneously—that the Primitive Baptist church and labor unions just can't mix... then their decision is final."

They said the church has decided that "believing in labor unions is incompatible with the discipline, tenets and doctrines" of the church.

Growers Urged See Equipment

South Carolina's cotton growers, especially the smaller farmers, last night were urged by Clemson Extension Service Director D. W. Watkins to attend county-wide meeting showing equipment to fight boll weevil and other cotton insects.

Three teams of Clemson experts began a swing through the state Monday covering six counties a day. Each team includes an entomologist, an agricultural engineer and a crops man.

"The meetings thus far have been well attended," Watkins said, "but we would like to have even more cotton growers, especially the smaller farmers, attend these demonstrations."

"As everyone knows, cotton farmers face the biggest boll weevil survival ever in South Carolina and must prepare."

Watkins said equipment shown, made at Clemson, includes a sprayer mounted on an old Cole planter, another mounted on a riding cultivator and equipped with an auxiliary gas engine for spraying, and dusting equipment. A film is also shown.

"Numerous farmers," he said, "have told us after seeing the demonstration they plan to make their own equipment. It is practical and the parts are available."

As a choice between dusting and poisoning weevils, Watkins said both methods are recommended by the extension service. "Both are good," he said.

Dates and counties to be visited include: May 4—Edgefield, McCormick, May 5—Greenwood, Abbeville, May 8—Anderson, Oconee, Newberry, Laurens, May 9—Greenville, Pickens, Union, Spartanburg.
