

Council adopts new ordinances

In regular session Tuesday night in council chambers, City Council gave approval on second reading to three new ordinances for the citizens of Newberry.

A document, known as the "Uniform Subdivision Regulations" was passed after much discussion over the objection of Councilman C. A. Dufford, Sr. Dufford insisted that the ordinance needed further study before enacting it into law. The ordinance sets out regulations for developers as to street layouts, drainage, water, sewer lines, etc.

Adopted an optional method for collecting delinquent taxes owed to the City of Newberry.

Accepted for annexation into the city a 16 acre section of Rosemont Cemetery. The cemetery is owned by the city, and controlled by the Rosemont Cemetery Association.

Council approved a new jury list for city recorder's court. A committee selected 400 names to serve when jury trials are necessary.

Approved a change in specifications for two elevated water tanks being constructed in connection with the new water plant being constructed on the Saluda Highway. The addition is a safety device required by Federal regulation under the recently enacted Occupational Safety and Health Act. Cost of the addition is $4,800.

Certificates were presented by Mayor Shealy to Philip Merrill Bouknight of the police force from the South Carolina Law Enforcement Division to perform Breath Alcohol tests. Mrs. Winifred Culclasure was awarded a certificate for completion of a course in Fundamentals of Governmental Accounting conducted by the Bureau of Governmental Research and Service of the University of South Carolina.

At the beginning of the meeting Mayor C. A. Shealy, Jr. made a statement referring to an article appearing in a local paper concerning a meeting of the Newberry County Water Authority. He said he was "perturbed by statements made at the Water Authority Meeting." Shealy said that city had always tried its best to cooperate with the water authority as well as other groups in the county. He expressed displeasure that the city was accused of not giving its cooperation to the authority. The matter of the city furnishing water to the authority and the rates it would charge brought on the controversy.

Shealy said that every effort had been made to cooperate, but that the city would not sell water to anyone at less than the cost it took to produce it.
