The Average Length of Life Docreasing-Not Pestilence-Not Famine-All our own Fault.

ERN LIVING have brought it on, It comes upon us unawares. The patients have pains about the chest and sides, and sometimes in the back. They feel dull and sleepy; the mouth has a bad taste, especially in the morning. A sort of sticky slime collects about the teeth. The appetite is poor. There is a feeling like a heavy load on the stomach; sometimes a faint, all-gone sensation at the pit of the stomach which food does not satisfy. The eyes are sunken, the hands and feet become cold and feel clammy. After a while a cough sets in, at first dry, but after a few months it is attended with a greenish colored expectoration. The patient feels tired all the while, and sleep does not seem to afford any rest, After a time he becomes nervous, irritable and gloomy, and has evil forebodings. There is a giddiness, a sort of whirling sensation in the head when rising up suddenly, The bowels become costive; the skin is dry and hot at times; the blood becomes thick and stagnant; the whites of the eves become tinged with yellow; the kidney secretions becomes scanty and high colored, depositing a sediment after standing. There is frequently a spitting up of the food, sometimes with a sour taste and sometimes with a sweetish taste; this is frequently attended with palpitation of the heart and Asthmatic symptoms; the vision becomes impaired, with spots before the eyes; there is a feel-

Mr. Dayis Declines the Invitation.

Congress appropriated a sum of money for the erection of a College The visit of his daughter North obtain a thorough education and enjoy all the facilities offered their Colleges.
Indeed the attempt to educate deaf-mutes at all is a very recent enterprise Looking back but a century or two, we find the first minds in law, literature, and the ology, united for the most part in rejecting deaf-mutes as incapable of receiving any education what-eyer, Aristotle before the Athenians denied deaf-mutes the possession of entellect, and we can hardly avoid the decision that the mistake of so influential a character was the prime cause of the long and cruel proscription which they afterwards endured. But as John Locke aptly expressed it the world learned at last that "God did not make man and leave it to Aristotle to make him rational." The rise and progress of deaf mute instruction has been like that of those great inventions, which were vehemently cried down at the start, but which finally achieved the fullest success, and for the last 65 years, the people of all civilized to our own day, when the hand of edu ation raises the same class from their mental and spiritual ignorance, trains them up to inteligent manhood and womanhood, and endows them with the sublime consciousness of their present influence and future immortality. We may fairly congratulate ourselves that America has learned so well that lesson of history which points out a wise fostering of education as one of the surest safe-

While deaf mutes are deeply sensible of what the nation has done for them, they feel that society is to be no loser thereby, If one from their own ranks thought less unfortunate may properly speak tor them, they ask the people not to over look the gain, material and moral, which will accrue to society through the education of themselves. And who can estimate the moral and aesthetic gain ? By what rule shall we calculate the reactive influence exerted upon society through the constant rescue of a numerous class from the bondage of an incomplete development, and their transmutation into capable, cheerful, Christian men and women? For with a good education though a man's ear be closed to all the "concord of sweet sounds," yet may be hearken to the call of duty, and his actions breathe of an
