The Moqui Indians. A hundred miles north of the Petrified forest and well into the edge of the Arizona desert are the seven strange and seldom visited Pueblo cities of Moqui. They all have wildly unpronounceable names, like Hualpi, A-hua-tu and Mishongop-avi, and all are built on the summits of almost inaccessible mesasislands of solid rock, whose generally perpendicular cliff walls rise high from the surrounding plain. They are very remarkable towns in appearance, set upon dizzy sites, with quaint terraced houses of adobe, and queer little corrals for the animals in nooks and angles o the cliff, and giving far outlook acros the browns and yellows and the spectral peaks of that weird plain. But they look not half so remarkable as they are. The most remote from civilization of all the Pueblos, the least affected by the Spanish influence which so wonderfully ruled over the enormous area of the southwest, and practically untouched by the later Saxon influence, the Indians of the Moqui towns retain almost entirely their wonderful customs of before the conquest. Their languages are differen from those of any other of the Pueblos; and their mode of life-though to a hasty glance the same-is in many ways un N. C., call on T. J. Drew, at The like that of their brethren in New Mexico.—Charles F. Lummis in St. Nicholas.

Building Superstitions.

In remote times a sacrifice of some kind was always offered at the completion of a building, either public or private. Sacrifices were not only offered at the completion of structures of all kinds—the foundations themselves were usually laid in blood, whether the structure was a castle, bridge, cottage or church. Originally-tracing the subject back to heathenish times-the sacrifice was offered to the god under whose protection the building was placed; in Christian times the bloody rite was retained, but was given another signification. In those days it was generally believed that no edifice would stand unless the corner stone was laid in mortar mixed with blood. Usually the blood was obtained by sacrificing a dog, a pig, a wolf, a black cock or a goat, and not unfrequently some malefactor's blood was poured out to make the ceremony more impressive.-St. Louis Re-

Price of Toothpicks. The little whitewood toothpick pointed at both ends was patented in America in 1866, and would seem a small article to create a monopoly in; yet a factory at Bucksfield, Me., used up many thousand cords of wood every year in the manufacture of this small article. The cord four loads. Two thousand five hundred toothpicks were sold for one shilling and a large profit was made. Now, the patent having run out, many others have gone into the trade, and prices have fallen to fivepence on 2,500 toothpicks retail, and even lower wholesale .-Chambers' Journal.

Changed His Opinion of the Jury. A gentleman who served on a jury that tried a prisoner defended by General Henry Morgan tells a good one on that counselor. In his speech in arguing the case, General Morgan complimented the jurors highly, telling them that he se lected them specially for their intelligence. The jury was not out five minutes before a verdict of guilty was returned, whereupon General Morgan exclaimed. "They are the worst set of fools I ever saw."-Albany (Ga.) News

There is a great deal of truth in the remark made by the dean of St. Paul's in the Morley hall, Hackney, while dis-tributing prizes to students of Lady Holles' middle class school, that "education in these days is, to a great extent, superficial, a considerable portion of it being required merely for show and immediate appearances rather than for use-fulness in life." But, after all, this wail is nothing new. Did not the Earl of Chesterfield advise his son to devote himself to the acquisition of literary scraps which he could quote in company, and thus acquire the reputation of a well read man at a small expenditure of the midnight oil? And did not the late Lord Neaves express the spirit of the time in the query. "What's the use of knowing unless others know you know it?"-London Telegraph.

The first German court of justice has held a session in Heligoland. The calendar was a blank. The clerk registered that the court met and adjournment

Deserving Praise.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. For sale at Wilcox's drug store.
