

Never Despair.
 Press back thy tears, sad, weary heart,
 Thy burden thou must bear;
 Be brave, be true; life's nobler part
 Is never to despair.

Why should'st thou weep o'er pleasures fled,
 And idly sit thee down?
 Some blessings yet are left to spread
 Their brightness on thy crown.

Look upward; still thou may'st not see;
 But trust and labor on;
 Life's richest treasures yet may be
 By steadfast courage won.

Press back thy tears and be thou strong
 And brave and nobly true;
 Let not despair hush life's sweet song,
 And hide its brightness, too.

The cloud that shuts the sun from sight
 Refreshes every flower;
 And darkness cometh with the night
 To weave its mystic power.

The Simms Monument.
 The pedestal for the reception of the bronze bust of Gilmore Simms, which has for some time been in course of erection on the Battery, was completed by Mr. Viett last evening, and is now ready for the reception of the bust. The committee have not yet appointed a day for the unveiling of the monument. The pedestal is a beautiful piece of work, and when then the bust is placed in position the monument will add much to the attractions of White Point Garden.—News and Courier.

Just a Patch.
 A few days ago a Trial Justice who sits more than he stands, went into the store of Daniel Jackson, Esq., in the village of Windsor and enquired the price of some pants cloth. Being told 50 cents per yard, he replied that he would take a patch. The merchant at first was loth to sell so small a piece, but remembering how low the fee bill had been cut, he measured the little T. J., and gave him the required fit, about the size of a number 2 horse shoe.—iken Review.

There was never but one duel fought in Illinois. One of the belligerents was killed on the field. The survivor was tried for murder, was convicted and hanged by the neck until he was quite dead. General Logan may have heard of this scrap of history.

A well dressed young man and a young woman richly attired, have been doing some of the principal interior towns of Pennsylvania. They represent themselves as a runaway match, give the names of prominent Pittsburgh lawyers as friends, and under the pretense that they want money to reach home and be forgiven have raised considerable funds. The richly-attired young lady is a beardless youth and the well dressed young man a swindler.

Dr. John Brown Smith, of Belcher-town, Massachusetts, has scruples about paying his poll tax, and writes from the county jail, where he is imprisoned on a collector's warrant, as follows: "I shall probably remain here during the remainder of my life. The law leaves no way of escape for a man who has conscientious convictions against paying the tax, as life imprisonment is the result, unless otherwise discharged by law. I can't pay the tax without violating my principles, and I never will do that."

MAN is a noble creature. On a Saturday morning he comes down town and spends sixty cents at a barber shop, making himself look sweet. He will spend as much more on a game of billiards—also get his boots blacked—buy two cigars for himself and a friend—making in all about two dollars for his personal gratification! He will then buy a box of strawberries for twenty five cents, and go up home and help eat them. The strawberries show that he is ready to deny himself, and that he never forgets his darling little wife.

The Brantford Expositor states that a short time since a son of Mr. James Turner, of the East Ward, drove a nail through the wall of one of the rooms. To his intense surprise a stream of honey pure as crystal came oozing out. Further examination revealed a stock of the delicious store sufficient to supply an ordinary family a year. The space between the wall is six inches, and for four feet in one direction, and half as much in another, the comb extended. The house is rough-cast, and the swarm of workers had entered by a crevice near the eaves.

A married man writes to the Chicago Times that the bachelors are so like the Chinese in many ways that they must go. He charges that single men can do work for less than married ones, and that, therefore, they are a cause of cheap labor; that they are not generally as good citizens, and that, in short, it is necessary to the welfare of this great country that bachelors stand not on the order of going, but go at once—and enter into matrimony. There is undoubtedly a responsive echo to this in every maiden's heart, whether she be advanced in years or not.
