Among the excursionists was a representative of the Demo-CRAT who unites with others in praise of the generous kindness everywhere extended by the tent-holders, and is seriously impressed with the beauty and loveliness of the Colleton ladies. Being a single man, as indeed were two-thirds of the excursionists, we are not so much surprised at the open-handed welcome they received as their willingness to return to the matter-of-fact business of life after such serious impressions. We fear such serious impressions. We fear George's Station will be visited by some of them often before another Camp-meeting comes around.
