MILLINERY OPENINGS THIS WEEK.

BEAUTIFUL DISPLAYS ATTRACT DELIGHTED THROGS OF THE GENTLER SEX.

Yesterday was another gala day for the women folk. It was the opening day for the display of fall millinery, coats, coat suits, etc.

When we went into the three big department stores to look over the pretty beaver-velvet creations, there were no ladies present to hear us express an opinion, criticize our views upon the various shapes or turn up their noses because of our bad taste in making selections.

This semi-annual inspection trip, as we have said before, always causes us more than a little embarrassment, because we know so little about the things we are to write about. What we think catchy or fascinating anyone else might pronounce hideous.

Then, when we go to our desk to write about the things we have seen, to tell a plain, simple, truthful story about them, we are seized by an inevitable fear of offending some good friend because we did not say enough in praise of the "little milliner's" artistic display or the merits of her goods.

We love peace, and if there is any possible way of keeping in the good graces of fellow beings we mean to do it.

Early in the afternoon we started on our little fall tour of inspection by dropping into the popular store of the Kingstree Dry Goods Co, where Miss Frances Johnson, assisted by Mrs Dell Sedgwick, had arranged a festival of pretty things for the ladies of Kingstree and surrounding country. Miss Retha Burgess and Mr Lawrence Swails greeted their friends and patrons on the main floor and in their usual polite and gracious manner entertained them by showing the new and beautiful lines of dress goods, neckwear, shoes and such other accessories as are required to set the average lady on the pinnacle of fashion.

At Mr Marcus' store we, as usual, found a handsome display of the celebrated Gage Bros hats in shapes and sizes ranging from the turban to the wide-brimmed black beavers or "Trench" hats with gold bands. These hats are all very pretty and stylish and notable for simplicity in design and are made up chiefly of hatter's plush, felt, velvet or beaver, the last-named material predominating in black. Mrs Marcus has an elegant display of coat suits and long coats in all the leading materials and styles.

At Silverman's store our eyes again feasted on similar beautiful things in millinery and we were convinced that the same styles are prevalent the country over, for here the same creations in velvet, plush and felt were the leaders. Mrs Silverman's display was attractively arranged. A nice line of dress goods, ladies' ready-to-wear dresses, coats and coat suits are also being shown by the salesladies, while "old man" Dave and the boys take care of those who want shoes, clothing and the less exclusive articles of apparel.

A large number of interested buyers and spectators visited the stores during the day and the proprietors each report of most satisfactory opening.

Good Things to Eat.

Apple Preserves

Select firm, acid apples; pare, core and quarter. Soak in lime-water 30 minutes, using 3 tablespoonfuls unslaked lime to a gallon of water. Rinse; drain, weigh. Make a syrup; using three-fourths as many pounds of sugar as there are of apples, and a quart of water for every pound of sugar. Stir until dissolved and let it boil 10 minutes before adding the apples—a few pieces at the time—until all are used. Boil vigorously until the apples are transparent. Remove and place on a platter for plumping; let syrup boil until thick. If a fancy pack is desired, add slices lemon (six to the quart), removing yellow by grating it off before slicing. These are placed in the kettle five minutes before taking the syrup from the stove. Place slices of lemon on sides of jar in circles, or diamonds. Fill with preserves, and pour over the syrup until jar is completely filled. Seal; process.

Gingered Pears.

Take pears not quite ripe; peel and core; cut in rings; to six pounds of pears allow six pounds of sugar. Dissolve in water; juice and rind of three lemons—grating off the yellow and cutting the rind into thin strips. Add one-sixth of a pound of root ginger cut into small pieces and tied in cloth. Place in enamel vessel and boil slowly until the syrup is ready to congeal, which may be determined by its flaking from the spoon. Seal in six-ounce glasses or small jars. Process fifteen minutes.

"DID MORE GOOD THAN ANY OTHER TRIED."

MRS NANCY BARRETT OF ANDERSON TELLS HER GRATITUDE.

Thankful for Help. Tells of Terrible Hardship She Was Forced to Endure and How She Won at Last.

Mrs Nancy Barrett, of 113 Highland Ave, Anderson, on May 24, gave the following statement: "I took Tanlac for general breakdown. My back hurt me terribly all the time and I had stomach trouble badly. I had no appetite and never ate anything much.

"The Tanlac did me more good than any other medicine I ever took. It gave me a good appetite and soon I was feeling hungry almost all day long. The medicine soon relieved the backache, made me strong and regulated my whole system. I am glad to recommend it, for it is such a fine medicine."

Tanlac, the master medicine, is sold by Kingstree Drug Co, Kingstree; Mallard Lumber Co, Greelyville; Farmers' Drug Co, Hemingway; S S Aronson, Lane; R P Hinant, Suttons; W D Bryan, Bryan.
