In 1822, One Hundred Years Ago

A Great Storm blew down half of the big trees and wrecked nearly every house in Williamsburg County. Dr. McGill tells about this storm in his excellent "Reminiscences of Williamsburg," and probably everybody in the county has heard stories of the terrible time. There are now not more than three buildings in the county that withstood that Great Storm, and very few trees that then were honorable with age. Storms have destroyed many more trees in Williamsburg than lumbermen have cut for commerce.

Tornado Insurance

Is the best thing that man has devised to mollify the working of the storm. I hope, most earnestly, that no more storms will come; but, in case one should blow and beat upon us with fearful fury, I trust that all of us will have Windstorm Insurance covering our property. I am selling the best Windstorm Insurance ever offered in Williamsburg County for less than the price of a first class song.

A wise military commander knows when the enemy is near and never allows himself to be surprised. A good business man understands that fires, floods and storms will come and keeps his property fully insured.
