THING TOO MUCH "CUSSIN".

"I never heard so much profanity in all of my life," said one young soldier, a boy who had been well reared, had a college education, has traveled extensively and was a bank teller when drafted. "I expected to hear some profanity, but there is entirely too much cussin' in camp, and I think the president of the United States ought to take some note of it and stop it. It is a nuisance and an annoyance to those of us who try to conduct ourselves differently." He added that the officers do not "cuss at" the soldiers, for that is against the army regulations, but there is just a lot of "general all-around cussin'."—Columbia Record.
