J. E. BAGWELL & BRO.

Dealers in fancy and staple groceries, 34 Morgan Square. The proprietors of this enterprising establishment are J. E. Bagwell and E. C. Bagwell, both of whom are natives of this state. The business has been established 19 years, and has taken a leading place among the progressive stores of this city. Their stock is very large, neatly and attractively arranged, and only the best class of goods the markets afford are carried. The large business done gives employment to seven people, and their clerks are always polite and attentive to customers. Courteous treatment is accorded to all.

F. T. CANTRELL & SONS.

Cantrell's shop has come to be a household word in upper South Carolina. F. T. Cantrell, though not an old man, is a veteran in the line of buggies, wagons and agricultural implements. He has recently taken his two sons into the business and branched out, having a large display room on West Main street near the city hall and a large warehouse on Ezell street. His line of vehicles is very extensive and embraces nearly everything that goes on wheels. He has an extensive repair shop also, and his stock of agricultural implements is one of the largest in the state.

GETSINGER-ATKINSON FURNITURE CO.

This firm is composed of active, energetic, thoroughgoing young men who have made up their minds to succeed if fair-dealing and pluck can do it, and their record since they began business less than two years ago justifies the effort. They have come to be one of the leading furniture houses in this part of the country, and while they cater mostly for the cash trade, they also sell on any terms the purchaser desires. They keep a large stock and believe in turning it over rapidly.

EPTON & CARLISLE.

The real estate firm of Epton & Carlisle, now composed of L. P. Epton and J. H. Carlisle, Jr., operating at No. 15 Magnolia street, this city, is incorporated under the laws of South Carolina as "The Southern Field Real Estate Exchange." This firm was organized and incorporated about two years ago and have done a very satisfactory and successful business in real estate, both city and country property, since its organization. The best evidence of the ability of this firm is the testimony of customers and clients. Without solicitation numbers of their patrons have voluntarily come forward and offered their evidence of fair treatment and satisfactory results of the business entrusted to the management of this firm. Some of their clients have voluntarily offered to make affidavit to the astonishingly satisfactory results made in investments by them. This firm has as its motto, "Honesty in all things." Their endeavor is, in trading, to make both the buyer and the seller well pleased with their trade.

Both the members of this real estate firm are native born and were reared in this immediate vicinity. J. H. Carlisle, Jr., has lived in this city during his entire life. He graduated from Wofford College and soon after his graduation received the degree of A. M. He then went into the insurance and real estate business and with very little intermission has been in that business ever since.

Mr. Epton was born and raised at Cherokee Springs, in this county, being engaged at farming until he was elected, in 1890, to the auditor's office in Spartanburg County; he served continuously in this office until 1898, and, after a short term in the comptroller general's office in this state, he went into the business of handling real estate in this city and has been engaged continuously in this line without intermission up to the present, thus making him one of the oldest real estate dealers now engaged in this business in the city.

KNOW THEIR BUSINESS.

These gentlemen are thoroughly conversant with all the ins and outs of real estate in the city and are thoroughly competent judges of actual values. The information in the hands of this firm in regard to real estate values in country property is second to none; the experience and observation of this firm along this particular line has enabled them to handle with exceptional success a splendid volume of farm and country properties. They have a competent and well trained force of office help, enabling them to facilitate the work and to give their clients the benefit of prompt attention to business entrusted with them. With such a complete organization and systematized arrangement of their business nothing short of success can attend their efforts.

THE FERNWOOD FARMS.

Spartanburg County has many model farms. There are today a greater number of men growing rich on the farms than ever before in the history of the county. It is the exception when a farmer nowadays complains of hard times. With fair prices for the staple crops and generous seasons, the one drawback is labor. These who solve this problem even partially find no difficulty in keeping a bank account.

As an evidence of what can be done with a farm properly managed, even by non-resident owners, The Fernwood Farms near the city, offer a fine illustration. A few years ago W. E. Burnett, president of the First National Bank, C. F. Thompson and A. J. Dillard bought this 1,600 acre tract. It was not considered extra fine land at the time, but it has responded to scientific improvement. Neither of the owners give his personal attention to the work, each being closely engaged in other lines, and yet the farms steadily improve and yield a larger return each year. Last year the 1,100 acres in cultivation yielded 350 bales of cotton, 1,800 bushels of wheat, 800 bushels of oats, 5,000 bushels of corn and many carloads of peavines and hay. They raise from 75 to 200 head of cattle, Poland China hogs, etc.

NORTHROP LOOMS

The scarcity of labor is preventing immediate growth, but this growth would have been checked long ago had not the Northrop Loom enabled less help to get more product. There are still thousands of common looms running in the South. Were they replaced with Northrop Looms, the present stringency could be averted
