MISS RUTH BYNUM TEACHES IN STATE COLLEGE PRACTICE SCHOOL.

Miss Ruth Bynum of Howard School Columbia has been appointed by Dr. R. S. Wilkinson to teach in the Practice School at the Summer Quarter in State College. Miss Bynum and two other teachers from Charleston will demonstrate to the teachers taking this special course in methods of presenting and motivating a lesson in the Primary School. As many of the teachers at the Summer Quarter, and a large number of the teachers in the State teach primary subjects this feature will mean much to them. Those in charge of the Children's House at the State College this summer will teach in the morning hours and take courses in the afternoon, which will be of double advantage to them. Columbia people will be pleased to learn that Miss Bynum has been honored with this appointment which adds to her good record as a young teacher. She is one of the best students who have come from the Normal School at Benedict College, and those who have seen her work in the New Howard school will be satisfied that Miss Bynum will put the job over and return from the State Summer school with laurels.

NEW HOWARD SCHOOL ACTIVITIES.

A few weeks ago the patrons of New Howard School were invited to the beautiful building at the corner of Williams and Blanding streets for the purpose of organizing a Parent-Teacher Association. With Rev. I. D. Davis presiding, the following officers were elected: Mrs. Belle E. Vincent, President; Mrs. Wilhelmina Roberts, 1st Vice President; Mrs. Susie Jarvis, 2nd Vice President; Mrs. Zenobia Jeffers, Secretary and Mrs. John Cornwell, Treasurer.

Principal W. P. Dendy proposed to the Association, the "Fence Fund," which was heartily agreed to by many encouraging remarks and pledges. The Association met again Friday, May 1st, to report what they had accomplished through the various devices planned by individuals, groups and classes.

With the president, Mrs. Belle E. Vincent presiding, the parents brought before the house, matters of vital importance. Among these were proposed, the disposal of the trash dump, screening the building and the supervision of a play ground for the children during the summer months.

The total amount reported for the fence was $147.90. The goal for the school is $250. The total amount collected to date is $231.50.

This report was so encouraging to the principal and teachers that they have been all smiles ever since Friday. Such cooperation is evidence that the patrons of the school are interested and willing to help the teachers in the welfare of the little citizens.

Some of the members of the Association who have no children small enough to attend this elementary school, should be commended for their civic pride and loyalty to the community.

After the meeting adjourned, the parents enjoyed a beautiful May Pole drill on the grounds. The little children made a beautiful picture as they tripped around a pole in colors, red, white and blue to the tune of lively airs by the famous Ed Davis, Band. The patrons will be notified of their next meeting through the children.

Prof. C. A. Johnson in Norfolk, Va.

Prof. C. A. Johnson is in Norfolk, Va., this week, where he has gone to inspect the plant of the new Booker Washington High School of that city. This building was recently erected at a cost of more than half a million dollars and is one of the most complete high school buildings in the South. Prof. Johnson says that this school has a high rating as to quality of work done both in the academic and in the vocational departments. In the vocational department the following sections are provided: Wood-working shop, Automobile repair shop, masonry and plastering shop, electric and plumbing shop. For the girls, sewing, cooking, millinery, laundry, nursing.

TID BITS

By Leonard Massenburg (By The Associated Negro Press.)
Discovery of a huge sandstone, sculptured monument of King Br-Engur, who ruled in Babylonia in 2300 B. C., by the joint expedition of the University Museum and the British Museum, was simultaneously announced in Philadelphia recently.

The monument is reported to contain pictures of the building of the Zikkurat, a tower similar to the Tower of Babel, about whose identity there has been dispute, some maintaining that he was a god, others that he was a mere person, and still and still others that he was nothing more than a symbol.

These things are considered to be archaeological interest by some aesthetes. The stele is spoken of as one of the most beautiful pieces of Mesopotamian art now accessible to the modern world. C. L. Wolley, head of the joint expedition, describes it in his report as ranking "with the famous and equally fragmentary style of the vultures in the Louvre and one of the two most important relics of Sumerian art known."

The stele was found far beneath the ruins of a temple built in 650 B. C. Dr. Woolley describes the find in this way:

"This monument was a stele, or slab, five feet wide and perhaps 15 feet high, carved on both sides with a series of historical and symbolic scenes, arranged in horizontal bands of unequal heights. It bore a long inscription, now fragmentary and with the king's name missing. But here luck favored us, for on a mere flake of stone, the drapery of a figure otherwise lost, there is inscribed the name of Ur-Engur. We can therefore identify the author of the stele with the founder of the Third Dynasty and the builder of the Ziggurat.

"The reliefs illustrate King Un-Engur's care for his people by the digging of canals for irrigation, and his piety in building for the Moon God the great Zikkurat at Ur. What remains of the inscription is a list of the canals made by him. It is illustrated by a most curious scene on the top register.

"The king stands in an attitude of adoration before the seated figure of the god. Above his head is an angel flying down from heaven, holding in her outstretched arms a vase from which streams of water pour out. The scene, which appears on both sides of the stele, seems to have been repeated several times in the register, perhaps with an angel symbolizing each of the principal canals. The whole conception is new to us, and the graceful figure of the angel is unique in Mesopotamian art."

MOTHER'S DAY.

In loving memory of my dear mother, Laura Bynum, who departed this life 2 years, 2 months, 10 days ago. How I miss my dear sweet mother, though it seems as yesterday. When she bade this world farewell. And left us dreamy how very fair, it needs must be since she lingers there. And you, O you who the wildest yearn, for the old time step and the glad return, Think of her still as the same say, She is not dead, she is just away. Her daughter, MRS. JOHN CANNON.

fellow who ruled along the Nile three thousand four hundred years ago, is now in the Cairo museum. It is the most remarkable mummy known. Although the face is brown, the features are fresh and almost perfect. The wonderfully preserved face is clean-cut and aristocratic and gives the impression of remarkable royal dignity."
