GO TO THE MOUNTAINS.

BY JEAN JEW.

The mountains are as old as the stars. And though you call, they shall not come.

There is no sweet communion between you and them at long distance. They do not cast their voice upon the air and lure you, srien-like, to their chilly bosoms...

Yet the glory of the mountains is unsurpassed. Their open chambers are as sympathetic as they are secret.

In the mountain is where the Supreme Jew lingered and unfolded His burden of persecution. The mountain swallowed up the cry and its generous air washed away sorrows of the soul.

Upon the summit of a mount, the remnant of a destroyed people found themselves. And Ararat still holds the glory and the divinity of their landing.

The ancient people of a land, buried beneath the avalanche of time, gave reverence to the imposing mountains and felt a nearness to a divinity on the cool green slopes.

The atmosphere of the mountains is god-like. It refreshes the soul. Their rising sides and spreading tops stimulate an appreciation of their divine influence.

Their very presence induces great vigor of body. They devour the enemies of health as they digest the troubles of the soul.

The mountain is the physician's consultant and co-worker. It is a relief station for his patients when physical symptoms are obscure and mental symptoms predominate.

The mountain never tires of a weary soul. Its charity is unlimited and it never seeks compensation. It quiets the mind and soul and gives rest to the worn. In its laboratory it produces a germicide for the pathologic-diseased-body and makes flesh for the weak and wasting.

It takes you into its arms, croons a mother's lullaby, and you sink in a restful sleep upon its breast.

Why not go to the mountains. They are the friends of man.

Chester Paragraphs

Mrs. Lillie Hughes, of Richburg, spent a week with her sister, Mrs. Marie Gilmore, Cemetery Street.

The many friends in Chester were shocked to learn of the death of Mrs. Cora Boykin, of Camden. Deepest sympathy is extended Dr. Boykin and relatives, from Chester friends.

Again, Chester was shocked when the news was heralded that Dr. Charles Foster, had passed away. About two months ago, Dr. Foster, with his wife, and 3 little children, came from Augusta, Ga., where he had been practicing for about five years, to spend some time with his parents prior to his departure to a new field of labor in a N. C. town. Although well worked down, Dr. Foster was up and about, and took his bed just two days before his death. Realizing his condition, he made all funeral arrangements, and left relatives and friends the consolation that he was prepared to die. The funeral services were held at the A. M. E. Z. Church of which he was a member since boyhood. The sermon was preached by his request, by his former teacher, Rev. T. H. Ayers, of the Presbyterian Church, Orangeburg. The casket was a pretty metallic one with silver breastplate. At the head stood a beautiful illuminated crucifix. Telegrams, resolutions and eulogies were read by several. Dr. Foster leaves a wife, Mrs. Mabel Foster and three little children; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Foster, four brothers, Mr. Samuel Foster, and Mr. Scott Foster, of Washington, D. C., Rev. Jas. Foster, of Charlotte, N. C., and Mr. Lowry Foster, of Los Angeles, Cal. The body, with undertaker J. E. Spann in charge was buried in a vault in Benson cemetery. The floral designs were numerous and came from far and near. The church was packed and the procession was very lengthy. Several cars of friends came from Augusta, among them, several doctors with whom Dr. Foster was associated while there. Dr. Foster was an excellent Christian man, and was highly respected by all. He was 34 years of age. Heartfelt sympathy is extended to all of the sorrowing relatives and friends.

Mr. James Stanback, who is a student at Tuskegee, is at home for the summer, after a splendid year's work.

The revival meeting at Calvary Baptist Church was conducted the first week by Rev. Watson, of Batesburg, and the second week by Rev. J. H. E. Nelson, of Concord. Both preachers stressed the point of self-examination, and the soul stirring sermons each night were a real spiritual feast. The result of the meeting was 42 added to the church. On Friday night, Pastor J. W. Coleman baptised 33 happy souls. The large congregation was very mindful of the beauty and solemnity of the occasion.

Dr. Joseph, Dr. Carr, Dr. Maxwell, Mr. and Mrs. Strother, Sr., and Mr. and Mrs. Strother, Jr., were among those who motored here from Augusta, Ga. Sunday and attended the funeral of Dr. Chas. Foster.

Miss Geneva Cornwell spent the week end in Columbia, with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Cornwell. Miss Cornwell will go to Atlanta University to witness the graduation of her sister this week.

The homes of Mr. George Hooper and Mr. J. Featherstone, in Jeterville, were destroyed by fire one day this week.

MEMORIAN

In Memory of my Dear Husband

Henry Walter Lewie Died April 20, 1924.

If I could only call him back; dear Henry, who has gone before. If I could only coax him back from that far distant shore. If I could only feel again his handclasp as of old; could hear his voice or see his smile, I'd give a mint of gold. Sometimes I run across a book, a ring, a lock of hair, or maybe listen to some sweet song that he had loved to hear, and all at once I don't know why, tears come to my eyes, when I think of my dear husband somewhere in Paradise.

Signed: Mrs. Evelyn M. Lewie, widow.
