WOMAN.

BY REV. WILLIAM HERBERT.

Fairest and loveliest of created things,
By our great Author in the image form'd Of his celestial glory, and design'd To be man's solace! Undeified by sin How much dost thou exceed all earthly shapes Of beautiful, to charm the wistful eye, Bland to the touch, or precious in the use!
His treasure of delight, while the fresh prime Adorns his forehead with the joy of youth, His comfort in the winter of the soul!
Chaste woman! thou art even a brighter gem To him, who wears thee, than a'er shone display'd Upon the monarch's diadem; a charm More sweet to lull all sorrow, than the tint Of spring's young verdure in the dewy morn, Or music's mellow tones, which floating come Over the water like a fairy dream!
Thou hast, as a wreath upon his neck, More fragrant than the rose, in thy pure garb Of blushing gentleness. Thou art a joy More sprightly than the lark in vernal suns Pouring his throat to Heaven, or forest call By blithesome Dryads blown; a faithful stay In all the world's mischances; a help-meat For man in sickness, and decay, and death.
Thou art more precious than an only child In weary age begotten, a clear spring Amid the desert, an unhop'd-for land To baffled mariners, or dawn of day To who has press'd all night a fever'd couch.
Oh, wherefore, best desired and most beloved Of all Heaven's works, oh, when fore wert thou made
To be our curse as well as blessing; lure'd From thy first shape of innocence to become A thing abused by guilt, and more deform'd As thine original glory was more bright!

THE WAY TO THE NEXT HOUSE.

Some years since, an acquaintance of ours set out on horseback from the eastern part of Massachusetts, for the green mountains in Vermont. While travelling through the town of New Salem, his road led into a piece of woods. some few miles in length, and long before he got out of which he began to entertain doubts whether he should be blest with the sight of a human habitation; but, as all things must have an end, so at last the woods; and the neat, brown house of a farmer greeted his vision.— Near the road was a tall, raw-boned, overgrown, lantern-jawed boy, probably seventeen years of age digging potatoes. He was a curious figure to behold. What was lacking in the length of his tow breeches, was amply made up for behind; his suspenders appeared to be composed of birch bark, grape vine, and sheep skin; and as for his hat, which was of a dingy white felt—poor thing, it had once evidently seen better days—but now, alas! it was the shadow of its glory. Whether the tempest of time had beaten the top in, or the lad's expanding genius had burst it out, it was missing—and through the aperture red hair in abundance stood six ways for Sunday. In short, he was one of the roughest specimens of domestic manufacture that ever mortal beheld. Our travelling friend, feeling an itching to scrape an acquaintance with the critter, drew up the reins of his horse, and began—

"Hallo, my friend, can you inform me how far it is to the next house?"

Jonathan started up—leaned on his hoe handle—rested one foot of the gambrel on his sinister leg, and replied—

"Hallo yourself! how'd dew? Well, I jes can. Taint near so far as it used to be afore they cut the woods away—then 'twas generally reckoned four miles, but now the sun shrivels up the road, and don't make mor'n two. The first house you come to though is a barn, and the next is a hay stack; but old Hoshin's house is on leuant. You'll be sure to meet his gals long afore you get there; tarnal rompin' critters, they plague our folks mor'n a little. His sheep get into our pasture every day, and his gals in our orchard. Dad set the dog arter the sheep, and me arter the gals, and the way we make the wool and petticoat fly, is a sin to snakes."

"I see you are inclin'd to be facetious, young man, pray tell me how it happens that one of your legs is shorter than the other?"

"I never 'lows any body to meddle with my grass tanglers, mister, but seein' it's you, I'll tell ye. I was born so by 'tickle request, so that when I hold a plough, I can go with one foot in the furrer, and t'other on dry land and not lop over; besides, it's very convenient when I moses round a side hill."

"Very good, indeed; how do your potatoes come on this year?"

"They don't come on at all; I digs 'em out, and there's an 'erastin' snarl of 'em in each hill."

"But they are small, I perceive."

"Yes, I know it—you see we planted some whoppin' blue noses over in that 'ere patch there, and they flourished so all-fired, that these 'ere stopt growin' just out of spite; cause they knew they couldn't begin to keep up."

"You appear to be very smart, and I should think you could afford a better hat than the one you wear."

"The looks ain't nothin'; it's all in the behaviour—this 'ere hat was Sunday-go-to-meet-in' hat, and it's just as chock full of piety as a dog is full of fleas. I've got a better one to home, but I don't dig taters in it no how."

"You have been in these parts some time, I should guess."

"I guess so tew. I was born and got my bro'tin up in that 'ere house, but my native place is down in Fordank."

"Then you said it was about three and a half miles to the next house?"

"Yes, sir, it was a spell ago; and I don't believe it's grown much shorter since."

"Much obliged. Good bye."

"Good bye to ye—that's a darn slick horse of your'n."

Don't you do it.—When you are offered a great bargain, the value of which you know nothing about, but which you are to get at half price, "being it's you," don't you do it.

When a clique of warm friends want you to start a paper to forward a particular set of views, and promise you a large quantity of fortune, and fame, to be gained in the undertaking, don't you do it.

When a young lady catches you alone, lays violent eyes upon you, expressing "pop" in every glance, don't you do it.

When a petulant individual politely observes to you—"You had better eat me up, had'n't you?" don't you do it.

When a horse kicks you, and you feel a strong disposition to kick the horse in return, don't you do it.

When you are shining it very expeditiously round town, in search of somebody with something over, who can assist you with a loan, and you are suddenly anticipated by somebody, who wants to borrow from you, don't you do it.

Should you happen to catch yourself whistling in a printing office, and the compositors tell you to whistle louder, don't you do it.

When on an odd occasion your wife should exclaim to you—"Now, tumble over the cradle and break your neck, do!" don't you do it.

When you have any business to transact with a financier, and he asks you to go and dine with him, don't you do it.

Look to Your Feet.—Of all parts of the body, there is not one the clothing of which ought to be so carefully attend to as the feet.
The most dependant part of the system, this is the part in which the circulation of the blood may be most readily checked, the part most exposed to cold and wet, or to direct contact with good conducting surface, it is the part of the system where such a check is likely to take place. Coldness of the feet is a very common attendant on a disordered state of the stomach; and yet disordered stomach is not more apt to produce coldness of the feet, than coldness of the feet is apt to produce disorder of the stomach; and this remark does not apply only to cases of indigestion, but to many other disorders to which man is liable. Yet do we see the feet of the young and the delicate clad in thin-soled shoes, and as thin stockings, no matter whether in summer or in winter time—no matter whether the weather is dry or damp, or whether the temperature of the atmosphere is warm or cold. But this is not the whole of the evil.— These same feet are frequently at different times of the same day, differently covered as to the stoutness of the shoes and their soles, and often likewise as to the thickness of the stockings.
I have often found, on investigating into the origin of the cases of diseases, that it has been a common practice, to go out of door in the forenoon, the foot being protected with lambs' wool socks, and warm and thickly soled boots; and to sit in the afternoon at home, only having the feet covered with silk stockings and thin satin shoes. I have so often found this to be the case that it would hardly surprise me were the practice found to be almost universal among the females of the middle and upper ranks of society. To this common, and sufficiently inconsiderate practice, I have traced many cases of incurable disease. To this alone may be ascribed many a case of functional disturbances; this lays the foundation for many of those derangements by which the first inroad is made into the constitution, the first step taken in undermining the health; the first of that succession of changes brought about, by which the young, and the lovely, and the healthy, are converted into wasted victims of consumption, or become martyrs to other maladies as fatal, although less common. I am sufficient of a Goth to wish to see thin-soled shoes altogether disused as articles of dress; and I would have them replaced by shoes having a moderate thickness of sole, with a thin layer of cork or felt placed within the shoes, over the sole, or next the foot. Cork is a very bad conductor of heat, and is therefore to be preferred; if it is not to be had, or is not liked, felt may be substituted for it. The extreme lightness of the cork, the remarkable thinness to which it may be cut—its usefulness as a non-conductor not being essentially impaired thereby—and the unappreci-able effect it has on the appearance of the shoe —all seem to recommend its use for this purpose in the strongest manner. I think that neither boots nor shoes should be used without this admirable provision against cold feet. There is sufficient objection to all shoes made of water proof of impervious materials; they are apt to prove much too heating and relaxing, interfering with the due escape of the cutaneous exhalations. Thin shoes ought only to be used for the purpose of dancing, and then they ought only to be worn while dancing. The invalid or dyspeptic ought assuredly never to wear thin shoes at other times. As to the common practice of changing thin shoes for warm boots, and vice versa, it is a practice that is replete with danger, and therefore rash, and almost culpable.—Dr. Robertson.

A gentleman in the spring time of life when walking with a lady, stumbled and fell. On his resuming his perpendicular, the lady remarked she was sorry for his unfortunate faux pas. "I didn't hurt my fore-paws," said he, "I only barked my knee."
