

mies, because they have hostile designs against us. Yet these men are daily seen in our streets, and move among us undisturbed. Are we any longer safe with such company? Is it not equally the duty and the policy of the city effectually to exclude from her limits men whose purpose of hostility is no longer doubtful, and who do not even effect the concealment of it? There has been great excitement in the community in consequence of these developments, and the general feeling demands that something effectual and speedy be done. Are we to sit down tamely, and allow ourselves to be scorned and trampled on by the minions of power, as if the State was already a subjugated province?—Charleston Mercury.

NAILED TO THE COUNTER.

We heard it bruited about that Chancellor Dargan in a late speech had repudiated Mr. Rhett. In a letter to the Charleston Mercury, the Chancellor promptly contradicts this misrepresentation. In concluding the letter he says:

"If Mr. Rhett is chargeable with 'mad fanaticism,' I am equally so. He is not 'mad,' but speaks the words of truth and soberness. I wish we had more madmen of the same stamp. I did not on that occasion charge political fanaticism upon any party or body of men in South Carolina. I do not know that such opprobrium can justly attach to any party in this State, unless, indeed, it be to those who for love and in awe of the great idol at Washington, are moving heaven and earth to drag S. Carolina from her lofty position, and plunge her into a state of weakness and disgrace, which will make her the laughing stock of her sister States, North and South, and render her forever impotent to do any act for the vindication of her rights and the recovery of her independence.

"I repeat, that the supposed imputation upon Mr. Rhett has alone induced me to write this letter. I could not be quiet and suffer the impression to exist that I had aimed a blow (feeble though it be) at this able, fearless, patriotic champion of South Carolina.

Property Exempt from Execution.—By the new code of Virginia the following is a list of the property exempt from execution:

"One cow, one bedstead, with a bed and necessary bedding for the same; six chairs, one table, six knives, six forks, six plates, two dishes, two basins, one pot, one oven, six pieces of wood or earthenware, one loom and its appurtenances, one spinning wheel, one pair of cards, and one axe; five barrels of corn, five bushels of wheat or one barrel of flour, two hundred pounds of bacon or pork, and five dollars in value of forage or hay."

ADVICE TO WIVES.—A wife must learn how to form her husband's happiness, in what direction the secret of his comfort lies; she must not cherish his weakness by working upon them; she must not rashly run counter to his prejudices, her motto must be, never to irritate. She must study never to draw largely upon the small stock of patience in a man's nature, nor to increase his obstinacy, by trying to drive him; never, if possible, to have scenes. I doubt much if a real quarrel, even if made up, does not loosen the bond between man and wife, and sometimes, unless the affection of both be very sincere, lasting. Irritation should occur a woman must expect to hear from most men a strength and vehemence of language far more than the occasion requires. Mild, as well as stern men, are prone to this exaggeration of language; let not a woman be so stupid as to say anything sarcastic or violent in retaliation. The bitterest repentance must needs follow if she do. Men frequently forget what they have themselves said but seldom what it is uttered by their wives. They are grateful, too, for forbearance in such cases; for, whilst asserting most loudly that they are right, they are often conscious that they are wrong. Give a little time, as the greatest boon you can bestow, to the irritated feelings of your husband.—The English Matron.

Repentance Pays No Debts.—A lady being visited with a violent disorder, was under the necessity of calling medical assistance. Her physician was very latitudinarian in his notions, and endeavored to persuade his patient to adopt his creed as well as take his medicine. He insisted with much dogmatism that repentance and reformation were all that either God or man could justly demand, and denied the fact or necessity of an atonement by the sufferings of the Son of God. The lady had not so learned Christ; she adopted his prescriptions, but rejected his creed. On her recovery she invited the doctor to tea, and requested him to make out his bill. The tea-table being removed, she observed, "My long illness has occasioned you many journeys, and I suppose you have procured my medicines at considerable expense." The doctor replied that "good drugs were expensive." Upon this she observed, "I am extremely sorry that I have put you to much trouble and expense, and also promise that on any future illness I will never trouble you again." So you see I both repent and reform, and that is all you require." The doctor shrugged his shoulders, and remarked, "That will not do me!" The words of the wise are as pearls.
