

found we would esteem him a brilliant specimen of the modern eccentric.

The great interest of South Carolina to which all others are at present merely subordinate, is the planting interest; that is the head spring, the main fountain of our strength; and here, it may be, we have committed an error in having planted too much, and pursued it to the exclusion of other callings. To trade and commerce, to ships and steamboats, to banks, railroads, turnpikes and lately to plank roads, we have not been inert; and in politics, State and national, is no labor, trouble, or expense, to join me in the project thus stated. These lands of so little value now, should be rescued; it is desirable, and it is practicable. Take a common sense view or any other view of it, and I fancy you will concur with me.

Much has been written and said, and many plans and propositions offered and tried, of cheap and easy means of transportation of our staple to market. What I bring before you is of higher consideration, that is, increasing the great staple itself.

The work can be done by the planters along the river and not by northern contractors or emigrant laborers. It will not require the outlay of a dollar, or employment of a man beyond the limits of the State.

On looking round for objections, but two present themselves. It may interfere with the navigation of the river, which is so slight now that river navigation is nearly abandoned, that no opposer would resort to that plea. The other, it would interfere with individual boundaries, Lunatic Asylum, her Bank of the State and its branches; indeed her munificence has been ever on a liberal scale. No sectional interests are recognized. A long pursuit of this policy may eventually burthen posterity with our debts, and be it so, if we put them in possession of ample means of payment, to which we are prompted by every duty and worthy motive. Can it be possible that the great author of all things who placed these fertile lands where they are, did not intend them for the use of man? They can be used and it becomes us to make an effort to appropriate them to our benefit; or shall they remain a wilderness or worse than a wilderness in our midst as it were to taunt us? Shall we fold our arms and remain as we are; shall we use no effort to make the waste places glad, the crooked paths straight, to set our houses in order, not to die but to live! Should I succeed in making up my fellow citizens from their apparent apathy, to investigate my premises and push their enquiries in search of new schemes of utility, I shall feel that I have been the humble instrument of doing great good. It entirely too much time and talent have been expended, which has had the effect to put us ahead in politics and behind in almost every thing else, but especially in domestic industry and enterprise, in which we humbly confess that other and apparently less favored portions of our country have gained the advance on us. We have lived too easy in the past for our present or future good; we have not used our birth-right to the greatest advantage, and have most unwisely slighted the gifts of nature. Other quarters of the country have raised our food for us, when we could as well have raised it ourselves, while our raw cotton has been sent off to enrich old and new England and other sections, many of whom we see now only as foes instead of friends.

In the retrospect there is but little to flatter or console us; the present only is ours, and may the future historian, in making a true record, have it to say, that in the beginning of the second half of the nineteenth century, the sunny South was born again, her people became practical, they were struck with new views, and learnt their duty, and like enlightened men they done it, the result of which was they prospered and went on to prosper, had plenty of earth's good things and were happy.

RICHLAND.

INCREASE OF THE USE OF OPIUM.—A correspondent writes to the New York Evening Post as follows: "One idea suggested in one of your articles is entitled to far greater weight than a person who had not given particular attention to the subject might suppose. I refer to the use of opium as a stimulant. The extent to which this is practised by people esteemed temperate, even in this country, is probably, one thousand times greater than generally believed. This may at first seem a very extravagant statement; but a good deal of investigation of the subject has led me to this conclusion."

MARRY FOR LOVE.—Marry for love, and labor diligently afterwards for the good things of the world, is both a wise and healthy motto for the young of both sexes. For love in the married state will ever be found the best promoter even of those very prudential and industrious dispositions which most conduce to its ultimate worldly prosperity; while without it there is always a conjugal dissatisfaction of passion, disposing its victim, more or less, according to temperament, to practical excess in some direction. At all events, the want of it, as in the case of the long unmarried, must naturally originate some vague craving for social compensation, the more insidiously unfavorable to consistency of conduct from its very vagueness.

IN CALLING ATTENTION TO DR. GUYSTON'S Improved Extract of Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla, we feel confident that we are doing a service to all who may be afflicted with Scrophulous and other disorders originating in hereditary taint or from impurity of the blood. We have known instances within the sphere of our acquaintance where the most formidable distempers have been cured by the use of Guyston's Extract of Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla alone.

It is one of the few advertised medicines that cannot be stigmatized with quackery, for the "Yellow Dock" and the "Sarsaparilla" are well known to be the most efficient, (and at the same time innocuous) agents in the whole Materia Medica, and by far the best and purest preparation of them is Dr. Guyston's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla.
