DIRECT TRADE .- On our first page we publish a paragraph from the Baltimore American, announcing that arrangements have been made in that city for the purpose of making advances to Southern planters who are desirous of promoting direct trade with the continent of Europe.

Of course, until the circulars are issued, we caunot know the details of the proposed plan. If it is only to establish a Baltimore brokerage upon Southern exports, we do not think the plan will be very popular with the friends of direct importation at the South. For that matter, the same business could be carried on in New York, a couple of hundred miles farther North, with equal advantage to the South. Political conside rations can never influence the channels of commerce, and the simple fact that Baltimore is in a slave State, in which a free soil ticket is up for the Presidential election, would give no advantages to Southern trade which New York does that time, were left quite desolate. It appears to not give. What we understand by direct trade have remained five or six months in one place, is a direct interchange of the rich staples of the and then to have gone in search of victims. Mexico .- The Dario de la Habana contains news which we had not yet received here. Its latest advices from the city of Mexico are to the 1st, and from Vera Cruz to the 5th instant.

. The government had suspended all communications with Jalisco, and has ordered the troops to Guadalajara.

The general impression is that the government of Arista is at an end. His ministry is composed of men who are very unpopular, and, on the opening of Congress, a complete change must take place. The man who will most probably be President is Senor Munoz Ledo, the present Governor of Guanajuata, who enjoys a high reputation as a scholar and politician.

The country continues agitated by seditious movements. Half a dozen departments seem in open insubordination. At Orizaba, at Guadalajara, at Mazatlan, pronunciamentos have been declared. Feeble attempts have been made to suppress them, but the Government is at once so weak and so unpopular that no energetic means can be employed.

Congress has assembled in extra session for the purpose of taking into consideration measures for the re-establishment of public order. With the exception of a decree greatly abridging the liberty of the press, nothing of importance had been transacted at the last accounts.

Advices were received at Jalapa, on the 23d, that the reinforcement of the National Guard that left Perote, on the 16th ultimo, for Orizaba, had been met by the insurgents at Cerro Gordo, and the entire body surrendered to the insurgents after a short fight.

In the midst of the turmoil and confusion that prevail throughout the country, the partizans of Santa Anna are beginning to take heart. We see that at the pronunciamento at Guadalajara, the following resolution was adopted :

"The nation invites General Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna to return to the Republic, that he may co-operate in sustaining the federal sys-

THE GREAT PLAGUE IN THE 14TH CENTURY .-A slight sketch of the history of this awful visitation, compiled from a source upon which we may pretty confidently rely, will show by comparison what a trifling matter is magnified into a pestilence at the present day. Like the cholera, this fearful pestilence first appeared in the East. It broke out in India about the year 1348, and thence extended its ravages to the western part of Asia, into Egypt, Abysinia, and the northern portions of Africa. It proceeded over Asia Mi nor, Greece, and the Archipelago, almost depopulating those regions in its march. According to numerous writers, where it was most favorable it spared one man out of three, or one out of five ; but where it raged most violentiy scarcely one ont of fifteen or twenty escaped destruction. Some countries partly by the plague, and partly by earthquakes, which were awfully frequent at no fewer than sixty-six Carmelite friars died bemany, where 12,400,000 persons became its victims. At Lubeck alone, according to the concurring accounts of several writers, 90,000 people died in one year, and of those 1800 are reported to have perished in the space of four hours,

About the beginning of August 1348, the scourge appeared in England, spreading everywhere such destruction that out of the whole were buried in one year ; and in the city of Norwich 57,375 died within six months. No gene-ral statement of the total amount of mortality in Loudon is given ; but there are details sufficient to show that it was terrible beyond imagi nation. The pestilence raged violently in Wales and Scotland; thence passing into Ireland it made great havoc among the English residents, but strange to say the native Irish were but little affected.

In 1349, the pestilence entirely ceased in England; but the destroying angel continued his march through other regions for several years longer-marks of his presence remaining on record down to the year 1362.

One of the most deplorable effects resulting from this visitation fell upon the hands of that unfortunate race-the Jews. A belief was prevalent in several countries that they had caused the pestilence by poisoning the wells and fountains ; and in many places they were massacred by thousands by the outraged populace. Twelve thou-sand of them were murdered in the single city of Mentez; and in other parts of Germany they ere exterminated.

No similar visitation has since afflicted the world; nor does its earlier history afford any instance of a calamity of the same nature, equally wide spread or destructive. Indeed, in almost every other memorable instance of the plague it has been limited to a particular district, or to even a particular city.

Humiliation and Prayer.

To-morrow has been set apart by his Excellency the Governor, as a day for religious worship. It is the carnest wish of the Executive "that all secular business be suspended, and that all our people assemble in their respective places of worship for the purpose of acknowledging God's mercies, deploring our sins, confessing the justice of his chastisements, and beseeching favor for the time to come."

Surely this request, so reasonable and proper, will be complied with. If ever there was a time when it became necessary to manifest our humility before our Supreme Governor and the Ruler of the universe, to tremble at His judgments, now is that time. When the mercies of God fail to reach our hearts, His judgments will assuredly awe us into reverence. We have not been, as individuals, and as a people, sufficiently thankful for the unbounded mercies and blessings vouchsafed unto us by a kind and beneficent Providence .-"Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people."

Death of Mr. Webster.

We briefly announced the death of this distinguished statesman in our last. Thus another "ray of glory is stricken from our starry banner"-the last brightest constellation in our political galaxy has waned out too .--WEISTER is gone! Within so short a time it seems strange to finite judgment that so many of the great of earth

Editorial Responsibilities. We might say a great deal under this head, but in the present case we design confining our thoughts to but one or two general views of the subject. Editors are always responsible, as a matter of course, for whatever appears under the editorial head, purporting to be such. Editors are also directly responsible for the communications of correspondents, where there is any personality involved, or the sentiments therein contained are called into question, or consequences of an unpleasant character result therefrom. How important that those who have the conduct of the press in their hands, should act from principle and motives higher than those of selfish aggrandizement-that in every case, a communication involving a serious question, should be read carefully, and thoroughly considered before it is suffered to go forth to the world. Also, that in every case he should, even with punctilliousness, require the rule to be observed of a responsible name accompanying such communications. An adherence to these rules would obviate many of the difficulties into which Editors sometimes fall; and do away with the humiliating necessity of either apologizing, or settling in accordance with the mode, which the false, and to say the least of it, unchristian notions of the world colls the amende honorable. It is easier to get into a difficulty sometimes than to get out of it; there are two alternatives usually presented-to fight out, or back out-but the best we have ever seen is to keep out. It is like forming acquaintances and friendships, this thing of editing a paper. He was about right who said-

"Judge before friendship, then confide till death.

Well, for thy friend; but nobler far for thee." In a moment of excitement a thought may be uttered which a lifetime could scarce efface from the mind of him who is aggrieved. That which is easily done may scarcely require an effort-when once done may never be recalled.

"A friend is worth all hazards we can run."

There is another kind of responsibility which Editors are compelled to assume, and to a sensitive mind, it is the unkindest of all. We mean the discrepancies which sometimes occur in the miscellaneous department of the paper; in spite it may be of care and particularity, amounting to over-scrupulosity in the eyes of some. It will happen occasionally, that where matter is selected by more than one, that in the hurry the caption of an article is only read, and the objectionable phrase or paragraph is discovered too late to be remedied.

We should be exceedingly sorry and mortified if it was supposed by any one, whose good opinion we respect, and desire to retain, that every thing published received our sanction and approval. We lack much of being perfect. We know that human character, at best, is very faulty. Let him who is without fault cast the first stone! We relish as little as the next one the low ribaldry and jest, suitable only for the pestiferous atmosphere of the riallo, and disgraceful to the columns of any newspaper in our day and time. We repudiate such ideas as sincerely as any one; and it is a source of sincere regret to our mind, when by chance or otherwise, these abominable perversions of the English language find their way into our columns. We never will pander to the vitiated and depraved taste, for the purpose of being considered a funny man! We have no desire for notoriety upon these terms.

CAUGHT IN A WATER SPOUT .- A Trinidad (W. I.) paper relates the following : The Schooner President Jeremie, lying at this port, got un-der weigh for St. Vincent, but had only got as far as opposite the Five Islands, (a few miles from the anchorage ground of Fort Spain.) when an accident of a most unusual and terrifying nature occurred to her. The master of the vessel had observed some threatening weather coming on, and had prudently taken in all sail, when he suddenly found his vessel enveloped in the vortex of what is commonly known as a water spout -of water, however, he saw none; but of the wind, or whirlwind, no more than, in all probability, he would like to see again, or seeing, be lucky enough to survive to tell the tale.

His little vessel, as he describes it, was carried down into a kind of well or vortex, and there thrown on her beam ends. She recovered her position, was again thrown down in the same way, recovered herself; a third time prostrated. In the course of these three upsets, seven of the eleven persons on board were thrown off the deck into the water, the master himself was thrown overboard a second time, after once getting on board out of the vortex.

Finally the whirlwind passed over, and of the seven overboard, five succeeded in getting on board again, but two, unfortunately were drowned; they were both sailors of the vessel; one of the two men drowned was an elderly man; a passenger who was supporting himself on a hen coop he had been lucky enough to find floating about, gallantly gave it up to him, seeing his age and infirmity, and swam off to the water cask floating at a greater distance ; but the poor man could not keep his hold of the coop, and was drowned; the other man who perished was not seen from the moment he fell from the deck into the sea.

The deck cargo fell or was swept overboardthe long boat was partially stove in-and the mainsail, although it had been previously lowered, was much rent. The vessel returned to town to repair and report damage.

A brigantine coming in the harbor, very narrowly escaped being involved in the same catastrophe.

THE LONDON TIMES .--- It is stated, as characteristic of the careful provision and good man-agement of this journal, that its long memoir of the Duke of Wellington, on the morning after his decease, had been prepared six years previously, to be in readiness whenever that event oc curred. It is understood to be written by Mr. · Dodd, the well known compiler of a parliamentary sumual, who undertakes the "obituary" department of the Times.

which was apt to be very cold, and sometimes in fact, they slept on a furnace when in a native house. The entire household was in one large room, where all the cooking, cating, sleeping, talking, and scolding went on, to say nothing of smoking and gambling. In the midst of the apartment there is always a large raised couner, on which every body sits and lies down to sleep. In one end of this counter, boilers are inserted for the cooking; and the heat from the furnace passes into the interior of the "kang," as the counter is called, affording a warm bed to every body. A reed matting, or a floor of planks, accurately understand how to place the reeds or the planks, he is likely to be "done brown" on by death, in the removal of these great men! one side, while the other side may chance to be stiff with cold. If this is cleverly managed, there is still much which is not exactly conducive to sleep; for instance, swarms of vermin, clouds of tobacco, and the fumes of the burning dung, of garlie, and rancid oil, such as the cot on wick is floating in. Then there is the gosip of one party, who may like to lie awake very late, chatting over their tea; or of another who may prefer having their tea in the middle of the night; or of a third who may want it before they go out at daybreak. On the whole, we feel that whenever we travel there, we shall prefer the tent, if we can keep up any vital warmth in us at all. In a tent, one can at least have a choice of posture; whereas in a Tartar inn, the sleepers on a kang, if numerous, must lie in a circle, with their feet altogether in the middle .---Dicken's "Household Words."

HONESTY IN BUYING AND SELLING .- Some are not honesty in buying or selling. Their rule is, to buy at all times as cheap as they can, and sell as dear as they can. This is a wicked rule. We often trade with those who do not know the worth of the thing bought or sold. It is cheating them to make the best bargain we can.-Sometimes we trade with those who are in great want, and fix our own prices, and make them much too high if we sell, or too low if we buy. There is a fair price for everything. Let that be paid or taken for everything. He who is just and true, and loves his neighbor as himself, will soon find out what a fair price is. Almost all men use too many words in buying and selling ; and when too many words are used there is almost always a lie somewhere. Hunt's Merchant's Mag.

Death of Colonel James Gregg.

We learn with regret from the Columbia papers that this estimable and venerable gentleman died near that place on Sunday afternoon last, the Carolinian of Tues day says:

"Colonel Gregg has been for a long time a distinguished and leading member of the Bar in Columbia; he had served the people of Richland in the State Legislature, in which he had been Senator for several years, and might have obtained any office in their gift had he desired it. He was a man of spotless purity of character, and had deservedly enjoyed, for a long period, the highest esteem and confidence of his fellow-citizens.

From the Charleston Mercury.

TO THE ALUMNI OF THE SOUTH CAROLINA COL-LEGE .- Having observed a communication in the South Carolinian some time since over the signature of "Euphrad," suggesting the propriety of a Semi-Centennial Celebration of our Alma Mater in 1854, I felt confident that the proposition would meet with a hearty response, not only from the Graduates, but also from the press of the State generally. I am surprised that no notice of the matter whatever has been taken by any paper or person, although every one, who has a spark of State pride in his bosom, or feels any interest in our time-honored institution, would surely rejoice to see any measure adopted, which would redound to the credit and prosperi-ty of "the right eye of South Carolina."
