a high-gear Citadel Bulldog offensive for a smashing 47-12 triumph over Presbyterian college in Charleston Saturday night.

Toon Britt, a small but fast-moving sophomore back, gave the Blue Stocking supporters the first of their only two chances to cheer with a 95-yard return of a kick-off for a touchdown in the third period. A short while later the Presbyterians opened an air attack that carried all the way from their 35 to the Citadel goal. Roddy Martin passed to Jack Adams for the final eight yards after five straight passes clicked beautifully and completely bewildered the Bulldog secondary.

A Soldier and The News and Courier

Next month will be the seventy-fifth anniversary of Captain Francis W. Dawson's coming into the family of The News and Courier. His is the story of a Briton who brought us aid, another of that great clan who do not give up in adversity.

The News and Courier wishes at this time and on this anniversary to recall this Englishman was willing to relinquish his family in order to fight for the South, and then, in defeat, to abandon his native country forever to help rebuild a stricken area.

Captain Dawson's life and works are of romance and powerful action. He came to the Confederate states as a sailor when there was no other way to get to the fighting South. Once here, he sought the thick of the battle, was thrice wounded and once captured.

From war he came to Charleston in the midst of the Reconstruction conflict, carpetbag and negro rule; then Hampton and '76 followed, and the earthquake and Tillman upheaval. He found time for quieter things, to lead in the movement to bring the mills to the cotton, to sponsor the reintroduction of tobacco in South Carolina, to serve eight years on the Democratic national committee, to sway the votes that gave Grover Cleveland the nomination, to organize the South Carolina Press Association.

Captain Dawson and his associates healed the wounds of two battered newspapers, The Courier and The News, welded them together and introduced modern journalism into South Carolina. Today some of The News and Courier family are on English soil, fighting, as Captain Dawson did, for a cause.
