Holiday Deaths In U. S. Reach 329

Holiday fatalities mounted to 329 as the long Christmas week-end drew to a close, but the toll from accidents was below that of last year when 431 persons died.

Lighter traffic on the nation's highways due to tire and gasoline rationing contributed to the fact that 199 were killed in motor accidents this year compared to 334 traffic victims in 1941.

The opposite was true, however, in fatalities from other causes, 130 dying in mishaps in the home or elsewhere as compared to 97 a year ago.

Columbia, Dec. 28.—A one-mill cut in corporation licenses and certain amendments to state income tax laws will be recommended to the general assembly by the State Tax Commission, Dr. W. G. Query, chairman of the commission, said today.

Query said the commission would ask that domestic and foreign corporation licenses be equalized and that the three-mill license on par value stock be reduced to two mills.

Principal changes in the state income tax laws which the commission will request were:

Elimination of interest charges on deferred payments.

Permission to allow deductions from taxes made on contributions by corporations or individuals to the state or to political subdivisions or to institutions supported, operated or controlled by the state.

Last Rites Held For Smith Gallman

Smith Gallman, colored, died last Wednesday morning following a few days illness. The funeral service was held Christmas day at Mt. Moriah Baptist church with Rev. Wade Reeder of Newberry in charge. Interment followed in the church cemetery.

Smith had been a resident of this city for a number of years and had many friends among both the white and colored people. He was a good citizen, upright in all his dealings, and held the confidence and respect of all who knew him, who will regret to learn of his passing.

For years Smith had spent most of his time working with flowers and shrubbery. He was a familiar figure on many lawns and flower gardens in the city.

Ranger Chief Chats With French Soldier

Lieut. Col. William Darby, right, of Little Rock, Ark., chats with a French soldier in North Africa. Darby's rise in rank was rapid from the time he first came to Ireland as a captain with the first task force of the U. S. army. As a major he organized an American "Ranger" battalion. After Dieppe he became a lieutenant colonel. A battalion of his Rangers was used to silence the land batteries at Arzon, enabling the Americans to land and flank the vital port of Oran.

FIVE NEEDED FORMS OF 1943 FARM PRODUCTION

By T. B. HUTCHESON, Agronomist, V. P. I., In the Progressive Farmer (January)

In addition to carrying out all other usual farm activities in 1943, the United States government is asking farmers to increase the production of five special groups of farm products as follows:

1. Meats; 2. Poultry and eggs; 3. Dairy products; 4. Health-producing vegetable; 5. Oil-producing crops.

These are the five special products needed to end the war and bring peace. As New Year Resolution No. 1, Dr. Hutcheson suggests helping with this war program.

People frequently criticize New Year resolutions. The argument is that so often, such resolutions are not kept. But is this the fault of the resolutions or the resolver? Because the road to perdition is paved with good intentions is no good reason for never having good intentions! Of course many good resolutions are not kept and many good intentions are not carried out. Yet nearly all great achievements are based on the determined will and resolve of earnest men and women. Hence what most of us need is not fewer resolutions, but greater determination to carry them to success.

Not only to America, but to every individual farmer and farm family the greatest blessing we could ask of Providence in 1943 is the end of the war and the coming of peace and victory. Hence I suggest as the No. 1 New Year resolution for every Southern farmer—

Resolved, That I will do everything in my power to help America win the war and win the peace... and I will do this by producing all I can of the five special lines of farm production Uncle Sam asks me to concentrate on—after producing my own food, feed, etc.

True enough, farmers are urged to produce these five kinds of products with less labor than usual... less machinery than usual... less fertilizer than usual. True enough, this calls for sacrifices on the part of every farmer. It means added hours of labor to already too-long days. It means a minimum of luxuries and recreation. It means doing without things that are almost essential for comfort. Nevertheless all these sacrifices are not too great a price to pay for the desired end—victory for America.

Though we see all around us what appear to be unfair advantages and discriminations in favor of other groups (and we must never cease in our efforts to remove these inequalities) we must realize that the farmers are the only group of our citizenry trained to produce food... and that it is now up to us to use this training for our country, no matter how much the personal sacrifice for ourselves.

Let our first resolution then be: That we will go over the five kinds of farm products especially called for by America's war effort and concentrate on at least one or more of these war-needed forms of farm production.

Animal Production

If we decide to help out with either of the first three lines of war-needed farm production—meat and meat animals, poultry and eggs, or dairy products—the following additional resolutions should be made:

1. That inefficient animals will be culled out. We can't afford to feed good feed to scrub animals.

2. That we will provide enough feed of the right kind for every animal kept. If there is not enough feed, let's get rid of some animals or get some feed.

3. That we will keep barns, sheds, and feeding lots dry and well bedded. This will pay handsomely in cash—to say nothing of the better disposition of those who do feeding or milking.

4. That all manure produced will be properly cared for. Manure is a valuable source of nitrogen, and nitrogen in commercial fertilizer will not be available in normal quantities next spring. The best way to conserve manure is to haul to the fields and spread as soon as practicable. Straw, leaves, cornstalks, and sawdust are all excellent for bedding. Add 50 to 60 pounds of superphosphate to each estimated ton of manure; spread 5 to 6 tons manure per acre so as to cover as many acres as possible.

Six Rules for 1943 Crops

When it comes to producing crops in 1943 both for ordinary sale or farm use and those oil-producing crops, vegetables, etc., we will produce for the war effort, six good resolutions would be:

1. To plant only seed of known variety, adaptability, purity, and vitality.

2. To look ahead and procure early everything necessary for producing any 1943 crop. Of all the factors necessary to make farm work pay even in ordinary years, none is more important than doing it on time. This will be doubly true in 1943. We should order seed, fertilizers, and all similar supplies a month before needed.

3. To begin plowing early. Crops planted in the first half of the season yield better. Early planting also means less competition with weeds and less labor in cultivation.

4. To plant no more acreage than we can cultivate well and harvest with available facilities.

5. To study the plant food needs of every crop planted. Fewer acres of good crops produce as much as many acres of poor crops and require far less labor. In fact, one of the best ways of meeting the labor shortage is to produce better crops on fewer acres.

RECRUITERS SEEK LOCAL WOMEN FOR WAAC

Sgt. John Mulenburg of the Greenville army recruiting office, and Pvt. Martin V. Brinkley, Jr., of the Charlotte army recruiting office were here Tuesday in the interest of enrolling local women for the Women's Army Auxiliary corps.

As the WAAC has been expanded to the full strength of 150,000 authorized by congress, many more women with varied skills, professions, and interests are needed. On December 1 another training center was opened at Daytona Beach, Fla., with women of this section being assigned directly to it.

The WAAC is giving valuable service to the army, and the list of essential duties it is performing is growing constantly. Its members are enrolled for noncombatant service with the army, and their work behind the lines, both here and overseas, will release soldiers for the battlefield. Included among the openings for women enrolling in the WAAC are stenographers, clerks, bakers, cooks, messengers, chauffeurs, photographers, librarians, radio technicians, and draftsmen.

Enrollment in the WAAC is open to women 21 to 45, inclusive, regardless of race, creed, or color; and all officers are commissioned from the ranks. The pay scale and ranks are now equivalent to the army.

Women in Clinton and vicinity, who are interested in joining the Women's Army Auxiliary corps may secure full information by writing to the U. S. Army Recruiting office in Greenville.

Application blanks and information folders may be obtained by applying at The Chronicle office.

Cross Hill Stores Destroyed By Fire

Cross Hill, Dec. 28.—A fire with devastating results swept through the business section of Cross Hill early Thursday morning, burning three of the stores.

The stocks of general merchandise belonging to S. D. Austin and J. B. Pinson and the Cross Hill drug store owned by Jim Hugh Austin were destroyed completely, leaving only the brick walls.

Firemen from Greenwood, Laurens and Clinton were summoned but the fire had gained headway and nothing was saved.

A small amount of insurance was held over the goods and buildings.

Volunteer Workers Needed By Board

The personnel of the local war price and rationing office wishes to thank those who have been so generous with their time in the past. At the present there is an urgent need for all who have the time for volunteer work. Anyone who wishes to volunteer may call by the office on South Broad street or telephone 82.

The board wishes to express thanks, in addition to other volunteer workers, to Mrs. Reese Young, Mrs. Zee McLees and Miss Marjorie Miller, who also assisted.
