Loyal Order of Moose Banquet

The Loyal Order of Moose No. 1306 entertained their wives and the Women's chapter No. 410 with a banquet Saturday evening in the assembly hall of Joanna club.

The banquet was opened with the singing of "America," led by A. B. Galloway, after which Rev. C. F. Allen gave the invocation.

Mr. Galloway then gave the address of welcome and Mrs. E. J. Willingham, Senior Regent of the women's chapter, responded.

Singing was led again by Mr. Galloway and as the hour of nine drew near the Nine O'Clock Service of the lodge was held with Mason Rowland at the chimes. "Blest Be The Tie," the closing song of both chapters, followed.

J. M. Ross, master of ceremonies, and installing officer of the Moose lodge, introduced the guest speaker of the evening, Honorable Ben Hill Brown, of Spartanburg. After he spoke the program closed with "God Bless America."

The hall was beautifully arranged. The large Moose flag stood just above the guest table.

Tall yellow and red tapers burned on the tables and along the center ran a line of red berries and cedars. Red and yellow mint cups were at each place as was a copy of the program for the evening.

The tables were arranged by a committee consisting of Mesdames Robbie Francis, chairman, Llewelyn Clark, Josie Boyce, Lavinia Cooley and Miss Naomi Hall.

A turkey dinner was prepared by Mrs. J. M. Ross, Mrs. J. J. Clark and Mrs. Alma O'Dell.

Places were prepared for 190 members and guests. Miss Blanche Durgin assisted in making this banquet a success.

A Private Citizen Speaks His Mind Spectator Comments On Men and Things

What is the law? When a lawyer is consulted he knows enough law to know that horse-back opinions on the law are not safe; the surest way is to look up the law. But suppose it is all son confused that one can't tell? Well, in that case the opposing counsel will make learned arguments to the court.

I've read in the papers that the highway department must pay a fee to the lawyers retained by one of our governors to defend an act of the legislature when it was challenged in court. There are several points which a citizen might like to have clarified, so I venture to state them: The legislature, under the urging of Governor Maybank, authorized the use of a part of the highway revenue for general state purposes. A citizen of the state challenged this in the supreme court as unconstitutional. The attorney general of the state, as the state's low officer, should have represented the state. In fact, nobody else has authority to set aside the attorney general. But the governor employed private counsel, and those lawyers presented a bill for $4,000, as I recall. The first point for clarification is this: What authority has any governor to employ private counsel for the state?

The issue here finally was passed on by the legislature, which authorized the highway department to act. But here we find a Constitutional inhibition, as I see it. The Constitution says: "The general assembly shall not, etc., nor authorize payment or part payment of any claim under any contract not authorized by law."

No law authorized the governor to employ counsel. The employment was, therefore, invalid, as I see it. If, as it seems to me, the governor was not empowered to employ counsel in the first place, then neither the highway department nor the general assembly may lawfully pay for the services. That, it appears, is a clear reading of the Constitution.

Our Constitution has been kicked about so much that this question is worth study. If the governor, any governor, may, of his own initiative, set aside the attorney general and appoint private counsel, he may likewise appoint men to do the work of the comptroller general, state treasurer, or any other official, even Constitutional officials, for such the attorney general is.

The Constitution prescribes the general scope of the governor's prerogative. His principal function is "to see that the laws be faithfully executed in mercy." He may veto an act but he has no authority to substitute private lawyers for the attorney general.

Why do we submit to the Northern Democrats?

Newspapers of December 4th carried an Associated Press story from New Orleans which quotes Governor Jones of Louisiana as recommending that Southern Democrats break with Northern Democrats. Gov. Jones' outburst was due to his resentment over the preference given Northern states in war contracts. Said the governor: "I can't see why we should continue to give adherence to a party which has treated us worse than the Republican party has ever treated us on these issues (allocation of war contracts). I can't see why we should adhere to the Democratic party if we are going to be stepchildren. I don't see why we shouldn't form our own Democratic party and join with the people of the Middle West."

"They (Northern Democrats) call us the nation's economic problem No. 1, but they seem more interested in solving the economic problems of some foreign nations than those here. I am convinced the only way to get results is to fight like hell and I propose that we do just that," he said.

A distinguished South Carolinian urged a break months ago, but for much higher reasons than war contracts. C. Norwood Hastie of Charleston, published a letter in a dozen great Southern dailies in which he pointed out that the New Deal rests on Northern Democrats and other elements which have broken faith with the Democrats of the South. Mr. Hastie urged that the South retail its own Democracy, that of our fathers, and that the South save its civilization by throwing its weight to whichever group might offer most to the South. Mr. Hastie was not counting spoils or the mess of pottage; he was concerned about principles of government and fundamental considerations. Under his plan the South would not merely be "in the bag," but would have to be reckoned with. Why should we seek to maintain the "solid South"? When Alfred E. Smith was a candidate for the presidency, the "solid South" split into splinters. Virginia, Texas, Georgia, Florida, North Carolina—and others—left the Democratic fold. Well, it could be done again.

We are Democrats. We are, in fact, the Democrats who have kept the party alive. Now we don't count. Strangers we are in our father's house. The party of our fathers seeks to entrench itself in power by using our votes, while slapping us and our mode of living—and holding us to scorn. Let us look at the truth: Why were you a Democrat ten years ago? Well, why are you a Democrat today? When Hoover and Coolidge were president we thought we knew why we were Democrats. Well, why are we Democrats under the New Deal? Is the New Deal Democratic? Wake up, Democrats! Let us cherish the Democracy of Wade Hampton and his Red Shirts; the Democracy of Ben Tillman; the Democracy of Woodrow Wilson; but what of this so-called arrangement today which coddles labor leaders and Negro politicians?

Are you ready for the Eleanor clubs and all the other innovations? If you are—well, then you are happy; but if you are a real Southerner, "look unto the rock whence ye are hewn!"

Let no man be lulled into a sense of security or well-being because we hear of no manifestations. The truth is that Northern Negroes are making every effort to organize Southern Negroes; and Northern Negro organizations are sending their leaders to tell the President what they want. Let them; but the power of the Northern Democrats is built on Southern Democratic support. If we have sense enough to act as our interest—and the national interest—dictates we shall withdraw that support and let them and their associate mischief-makers crash to the ground.
