RECOLLECTIONS OF CLINTON

James Woodrow of Columbia, the "Southern Presbyterian," one of the old and substantial papers of the Presbyterian church, and its purchase brought honor and nothing more to the town of Clinton. Rev. W. S. Bean was elected editor and certainly put out a fine paper. The only lack was plenty of cash to run it. It became a burden upon the stockholders and was finally sold to Rev. J. F. Jacobs, of the Religious Press Advertising agency of Clinton. He ran the paper very successfully for five years and then sold it at a good figure to Rev. T. E. Converse, who moved it to Atlanta, and so, the paper was lost to us. Its subsequent history is not a matter of Clinton history. It is only necessary to add that it is now a component part of the "Presbyterian of the South" and is published at Richmond, Va.

While running the "Southern Presbyterian," the same publishers started The Clinton Chronicle which was later sold to and is edited by Wilson W. Harris.

The college has been in the printing business also, not only sending out its annual catalogue and quarterly bulletin, but also printing magazines. At one time it printed an "educational journal" and at another time, the "Collegian."

The "Thornwell Messenger" was originated in the Thornwell Orphanage Press in 1910 and is a religious (Presbyterian) weekly, and boasts several thousand subscribers. It is the only Presbyterian weekly now published in South Carolina. "The Orphan Work" was begun with the century in 1901 and is the orphanage college bulletin.

Very much good printing in the way of books, pamphlets and leaflets.

For fifteen years, the bulletin of the First Presbyterian church was printed under the heading "Clinton Presbyterian Weekly News" and was only discontinued in 1912 after the resignation of the writer from the pastorate of that church.

It is a pity that the town library has not preserved copies of all these publications. They would be very valuable in future years when the history of Clinton is to be written. Certainly the material would be bountiful, if only it had been preserved.
