Thornwell Boy Back In Service Third Time

F. M. Stutts has received a letter from Edward A. Groves, who was reared in the Thornwell orphanage, and is now in the service, stationed at San Francisco, Cal. Major Groves entered the orphanage as a lad in 1889, from Savannah, Ga. He returned here for the alumni reunion in 1911, and for a number of years has held a responsible railroad position in California.

In writing his friend, Mr. Stutts, he said:

"It is a long cry back to a certain day in June 1898, to the present. I met Dr. Jacobs on one of the walks near the old laundry that day. He told me he had heard that I had or planned to join the army. I admitted that I had done so. He wished me luck but as I recall he did not give his enthusiastic approval.

"Well, I have signed up for the third time. But this time I know my action would have the hearty approval of Doctor.

"I was only fifteen then. He should have given me a spanking and sent me to bed. Now I've just celebrated my 60th birthday.

"The war department reinstated my commission as Major, Infantry, and I am now assigned to the Port of Embarkation, San Francisco, as assistant port transportation officer.

"In 1918 we rather looked down on the service of supply as a necessary evil, but on this occasion it looks different due to the extreme distances, both by rail and water, as well as the large number of people to be fed and clothed, etc. So I guess I will do the best I can wherever they put me. I am scheduled for overseas but am not so sure of that. As my rank dates from Nov. 28, 1941, I am hoping it will not be long before I gain my silver leaf or eagle. I thought I was entitled to one or the other when I entered service, but it seems it is out of order to promote before reinstatement of commission previously held. It is necessary to enter service before promotion is available.

Well, the main point of this letter is this—In celebration of my 60th birthday anniversary, my reinstatement into the army to serve for the third time in a national emergency, and in thanks for the fact that at sixty I am physically fit for unlimited service in the army, I am enclosing check. Use it in any way you see fit.

"Kindest regards and best wishes to Thornwell and to you.

"Sincerely,
"E. A. GROVES."

COLDS—Cure

It is an amazing thing, in this age of medical and scientific miracles, that no one has been able to figure out how to cure a common cold.

Our doctors can take us apart and put us together again, they can use blood of one man to save the life of another, they can shoot a liquid into our bloodstream which will cure diphtheria or typhoid fever, they can make the blind see, the lame walk and have often brought the dead back to life—but when it comes to fighting a case of the sniffles the medical profession is an almost total loss.

MEDICINES—Expense

Although it seems apparent that there is no real cure for a cold, as a nation we probably spend over a billion dollars a year to make sure. In addition to the fortune we pay to doctors to hear them tell us to "take it easy for a few days," we spend many hundreds of millions for our pet cold remedies or those suggested by our friends.

It is an interesting experiment, when you have a cold, to ask each interested to know he has returned home after being a patient at Hays hospital.

Friends of Mrs. Lester Cole will regret to know she is a patient at Hays hospital.

Mrs. Jim Coleman is ill at her home on Main street.

Mrs. W. R. Cauble is a patient at the General Hospital in Greenville.

Birthdays

G. C. McInville will observe a birthday February 13th.

Mrs. C. C. Smith observed a birthday February 7th.

Barry McLendon will have a birthday February 14th.

C. B. Gilham observed a birthday February 8th.

Birthday Party

Little Gerald Dean Satterfield entertained with a birthday party Friday afternoon from five to six o'clock. Sixteen friends enjoyed the occasion. Jewell and Sarah Alice Satterfield entertained the little folk with games. Wafers, sandwiches and punch were served.

Girls Auxiliary To Meet

The Girls Auxiliary will meet tonight at Lydia Baptist church at 7:30. Mrs. Oakley leader asks every member to be present.

Birth Announcement

Mr. and Mrs. Furman Holcombe of Camden, formerly of this community, announce the birth of a son, Lamar Edward, February 1. Mrs. Holcombe is the former Miss Mae McLendon.

Smith Infant

Funeral services for Miriam Diane Smith infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Smith, were conducted Friday afternoon at Calvary Baptist church by Rev. C. R. Anderson. Burial was in the church cemetery.

person you see what he or she suggests you do for it. There is hardly a person who won't have something to suggest. Some will be enthusiastic about one medicine, some another—and if you interview enough people you will finally get a list of everything on the druggist's shelf. But the very fact that there is such wide disagreement over what might help is pretty good evidence that none of them are going to perform any miracles for you.

FDA—FTC

The Food and Drug administration and the Federal Trade commission have, for years carried on campaigns to stop every manufacturer of a product for colds from making exaggerated claims.

As a result of constant pressure and a general tightening up of the laws, there isn't a single cold product which is now permitted to use the word "cure" on its package or in its advertising. The control has gone so far, in fact, during the past two years, that the claims on most packages now discourage the purchaser.

For years I have had a favorite remedy which I felt really did get rid of my colds quickly. When I first started using it there was a statement on the bottle that my money would be refunded unless it relieved my cold within 24 hours.

Recently, however, the label has been changed radically and the present label is so negative in its claims that I have lost most of my faith in that product.

I never did know whether the medicine really helped, but reading those strong claims on the label seemed to make me feel as though I was well on the road to recovery as soon as I opened the bottle.

LOSS—Offensive

There are, of course, a lot of medicines which do make breathing easier and which make a cold less hard to bear. So, in spite of there being no cures, there still are reasons why most of us are willing to spend money on cold medicines.

As for seeing the doctor, that also seems strongly advisable in the case of a bad cold. Not that the doctor can do much about the cold, but he can tell if we are threatened with pneumonia or have symptoms of any other serious ailments, which often accompany or follow colds.

Since the common cold itself results in the loss of more man hours of work than any other sickness, and since it causes more general discomfort in the lives of all of us than does almost any other ailment, it would seem worthwhile for the government to launch a major scientific offensive toward the goal of keeping every American nostril working 24 hours a day.
