Seven S. C. Members Vote To Override President's Veto

Washington, June 25.—Here is how South Carolina's senators and repre-sentatives voted in the roll-calls which overrode the president's veto of the Smith-Connally anti-strike bill: Senate: For overriding—Maybank and Smith.

House: For overriding — Bryson, Fulmer, Hare, McMillan and Rich-ards. Among those listed as absent or not voting, Representative Rivers. The latter, who was not in Washing-ton, was reported later in a news-paper dispatch to have said he would also have voted to override the veto had he been present.

LABOR FIGHT TO BECOME BITTER

President's Veto of Anti-Strike Act Intensifies Feeling In Washington.

Washington, June 28.—The action of congress in over-riding the Presi-dent's veto of the Connally-Smith anti-strike bill means that the labor problem which has plagued congress the past 10 years will now be more intensified.

Regardless of the fact that already labor leaders have declared that they will seek defeat of the 56 senators and 244 house members who voted to override the veto, the fact remains that the action of congress, as seen by many, was not so much a rebuke to the President and labor generally, as it was directed at John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Work-ers of America, who has had the coal miners of the country in and out of the mines during this critical war period at his will, and with the con-troversy as to the mine wage still unsettled.

The first alliance of the President with labor was when Mr. Lewis was its chief spokesman and the irony of the present situation is that Mr. Roosevelt emerges the hero of labor, though again lined up on the same side with Mr. Lewis.

Regardless of the threat of union leaders to defeat senators and house members, those who voted against the President are able to say that labor has fared well the past decade at the hands of congress, and that it was when presidential directives failed to get action that congress took a hand and passed the Connally-Smith bill by overwhelming votes. So, the 56-to-25 vote in the senate over-riding the President's veto was taken as soon as the veto message was de-livered. The house, too, declined to delay the issue and within an hour after the vote was brought before it, also acted, the vote being 244 to 108.

The suggestion by the President, that as a substitute, congress enact legislation making the military draft age 18 to 65, so that in plants taken over by the government—as the coal mines have been taken—he could draft the workers into the military forces if they struck against the gov-ernment, did not meet with much favor on Capitol Hill. Under existing law, military draft for the younger coal miners already is possible.

Under the President's plan it would have been possible to take them of all ages—many, of course, being en-tirely unfit for actual military duty. Instead of being a "work or fight" proposition for these over-age work-ers, it would have been a work for regular miners' wages, or work for pay at $50 a month, or go to the guardhouse.

Members of congress did not op-pose such a proposition because of sympathy for the miners on strike.

President Roosevelt emerges from the situation as the hero of organ-ized labor, whose unions demanded a veto of the anti-strike bill. It is true they would have protested vigorously the proposal of the President to draft workers into the army—or to hold the threat of such draft over their heads. But it was pretty clear that congress would have resisted such a plan and the probabilities are that the Presi-dent would not have exercised the power demanded, or have had an opportunity to exercise it.

It has been charged that the Presi-dent was playing for the labor vote next year—and that he would not have signed the anti-strike bill, which was opposed by the unions. Now he has the credit of having vetoed the bill—as labor desired—and he also has an anti-strike law on the statute books, with whatever political effect it may have laid on the shoulders of congress. The thing cuts both ways, however.

But only time can reveal the effect as the war goes on, and new issues arise. If Mr. Roosevelt wants a fourth term, he will find labor lined up for him, John L. Lewis notwithstanding.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to re-move impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery. Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder dis-order are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination. There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!
