Better Health and Education for Indians

Washington, Aug. 25.—(By the Associated Press.)—Plans for the improvement of the condition of the Indians, with particular regard to health and education, are being worked out by Commissioner Burke of Indian Affairs with the approval of Secretary Fall. Indian increase in the estimates for the Indian Bureau probably will be asked in the next Indian appropriation bill.

The American Red Cross recently acceded to a request from the Interior Department for the assignment of three trained nurses to be detailed to the Indian Bureau for one year, as the first step in Commissioner Burke's program. In addition plans for enlarged school facilities to educate 20,000 Indian children of school age not now in school are being worked out. Approximately 6,000 of this number belong to the Navajo tribe and have never been to school.

The nurses assigned to the Indian service, it was said at the Indian Bureau, will make a survey of conditions on Indian reservations and give a demonstration of what may be accomplished by women trained as nurses and in welfare work, to lay the foundation for asking congress for an appropriation to enable the Indian Bureau to employ on the reservations women of a higher grade for matrons and general field service, according to Commissioner Burke's plans.

"This is a great opportunity," Commissioner Burke said today in commenting on his plans, "for improving home conditions among Indians and in teaching sanitation and looking after the health of the children. The American Red Cross at its recent meeting, made an allotment of funds to cover the expense necessary to employ the three nurses and they will be soon assigned to the Indian Bureau and will go into the field to spend one year. One will be stationed on the Pine Ridge and Rosebud reservations in South Dakota; the other two will go to the Southwest and work among the different Indians in Arizona and New Mexico. This is only part of a general plan adopted by the Interior Department for improving and bettering conditions among the Indians.

"Another subject that is receiving a great deal of attention is that of education—building up the school system in the service, increasing the attendance to the full capacity and strengthening the personnel. There is said to be 20,000 Indian children of school age not now in school, and fully 6,000 of this number are Navajos that have never been to school. An increase in the estimates for education will be submitted, and the hope that congress will take the view of the demand.

"It is planned, it was said, that they can be obtained, to enable many of the school plants by purchase and other cheap construction, and it is also hoped that two abandoned military posts, Fort Wingate, New Mexico, and Fort Apache, Arizona, can be transferred by the War Department to the Interior department, to be converted into Indian schools. Both of these posts are desirable and well located, and should care for probably 1,000 pupils.

The Interior Department and the Indian Bureau are giving much attention to health conditions at the several Indian schools and upon the different Indian reservations, and the present policy is to try and have at least one hospital upon every reservation with a capacity sufficient to care for the sick, and particularly Indians that are very aged and infirm and without means or homes where they can be comfortably and properly cared for."

Airplane and Tractors Aid Alaska's Development

Anchorage, Alaska, Aug. 1.—(By the Associated Press.)—Remote sections of Alaska, weeks and months away from the railroad under the old transportation methods, are being brought closer to the seaports and railroad towns by the airplane and tractor.

Two sections of Alaska, the Iditarod and the great Kuskokwim country, reached from here in the winter only after a fifteen days' trip with a dog team, can be made in two or three days by airplane.

The tractor's part in the revolution of transportation methods comes in hauling ore and coal from the mines to the railroads. The army type of caterpillar tractor, dragging from 20 to 50 tons, breaks its own trail over the snow and is rapidly taking the place of the horse in many places.

Sections of the far away Alaska peninsula and Aleutian Islands with their oil possibilities, are soon to be prospected by airplane for a group of Anchorage business men. The machine will be of the hydroplane type and will alight in the rivers, bays and lakes for shore work.

One aviator, C. O. Hammontree, is considering establishing a chain of stations in the interior to which he can carry supplies by the air route. At present the prospectors on the "inside" generally spend their spring months hauling their supplies in over the snow trails. Hammontree's plan is to carry supplies to established posts and thus save the prospectors the heavy task of pulling their food and equipment over the snow. The stations would be on the lakes or rivers so the plane could light on the water.

To Instill Love of Music Purpose of George Eastman

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 25.—The Eastman Theater, George Eastman's $5,000,000 gift to the University of Rochester as an integral part of the Eastman School of Music, will be opened early in September. The playhouse was conceived by Mr. Eastman as a means to educate the masses in the love of music. He purposes to draw them to good concerts by the use of motion pictures.

The theater has been described as one of the most unusual structures in the world. It contains every kind of musical instrument, including the largest organ in any playhouse in the world; it is wonderfully well ventilated and lighted, and it is adorned with paintings worth several hundred thousand dollars. It seats 8,400 people.

The idea was conceived by Mr. Eastman from altruistic motives. There will be sought a solution to the problems confronting the purveyors of low-priced entertainment, so that the character of the entertainment offered the masses may be improved, refined and undergo an evolution that will establish good music as an every day need.

"It is necessary for people to have an interest in life outside of their occupation," said Mr. Eastman in commenting upon the enterprise. "I believe that working hours are going to be shortened in order that people may live fuller and happier lives. What is going to be done with the leisure thus obtained? I am not at all of the opinion that people have been ground down by industry. Leisure is unfruitful because we do not know how to use it productively. Do not imagine from what I say that I am a reformer—far from that. I am interested in music personally, and I am led thereby to want to share my pleasure with others.

"For many years I have been connected with musical organizations in Rochester. I have come to see that what we need is a body of trained listeners quite as much as a body of trained performers. Without appreciation, without the presence of a large body of people who understand music and who get joy out of it, any attempt to develop the musical resources of any city is doomed to failure. Because in Rochester we realize this, we have undertaken a scheme for building musical capacity on a large scale from childhood.

I do not imagine that music is going to occupy all of the leisure interests of people. I know that my own interests are varied. I am fond of athletics. All sorts of sports, recreations and diversions must be developed if we are to make full use of our leisure. In this field certainly it is not a case of righting old wrongs, but of creating something entirely new. Interests must be built up if we are to get the happiest use of leisure. Incidentally, in the pursuance of this ideal I should like to see Rochester become a great musical center, known throughout the entire world."

Entrance to the theater is by way of a commodious lobby finished in rich marble and bronze. The massive auditorium abounds in exquisite marbles, sculptural reliefs and rich hangings. The decorative scheme is Italian renaissance, Venetian in treatment.

When the playhouse opens it will mark the end of motion picture presentation in the dark, according to the experts associated with its construction. Through the lighting system, the hazard of a gloomy auditorium will be eliminated. The theater will be sufficiently well illuminated so that patrons may read without any visionary effort.

The theater will serve also as a medium of expression for the hundreds of pupils of the Eastman School of Music.

Federal Deputies Patrol Property

Federal deputies have arrived in Columbia to observe conditions around the union depot and the Southern shops. The government agents will patrol the railroad property to enforce compliance with orders from the United States court.

It is estimated there will be 15,000,000 motor vehicles on the highways in the next decade.
