Feeding of Russian Children
Stopped by Local Bandits

Kiev, Oct. 5.—Efforts to feed the children of Chigirin, southeast of Kiev, have been abandoned by the American Relief Administration because of the continued activity of bandits.

Chigirin, a village 30 miles from the railroad, is situated in a wild country which for years has been infested by robber bands. Government officials would not give guarantees for the safety of the A. R. A. warehouses, so finally endeavors to establish food kitchens in the Chigirin district were given up.

Wagner will be present and make an address on the importance of music. Indian girls picking huckleberries in the Cascade Mountains wear silk dresses, rolled-down socks, fancy lingerie, bobbed hair, short skirts, no corsets and use up-to-date flapper language. They do not, however, discard the primitive tribal mantle of an Indian blanket thrown over the shoulder, shawl fashion.

German Coins Prohibited

In New Guinea

Sydney, N. S. W., Oct. 5.—The use of German coins or currency in the mandated territory of New Guinea has been prohibited by an ordinance issued by the federal government, under a penalty of 100 pounds or six months imprisonment. Natives, however, may pay to the administration German coins for fees, taxes or other excises.

The ordinance also prohibited the use of token and counters for trade purposes or wages and provided that a portion of a shell known as "Gold lip" may be used as legal tender at the rate of 12 shillings a pair, except for the purchase or barter of trochus shell.

Religious or charitable institutions operating in the territory are exempted from the prohibitions of the ordinance.

Railroad Restaurants in

Russia Offer Food in Plenty

Tver, Russia, Oct. 5.—The old time scenes at American railway junctions, when the brakeman came through the train shouting: "Blank-ville, 20 minutes stop for supper," are being duplicated in Russia as the normal conditions of travel are being restored and railway station restaurants, foodless and closed for four years, are opened again.

Passengers during the revolution had nothing to eat on long journeys except what they brought with them, but now practically every station restaurant offers almost a pre-war bill of fare. As the trains pull in a scramble for food ensues that would rival an American quick lunch counter during the rush hours.

Some of the more important through trains have dining cars, but they are patronized only by first-class passengers, and even many of these enjoy the rush at the station restaurants more than the decorum of the wagon restaurant.

Singing Children

A director of public school music proposes to introduce a music-teaching system which will enable the average eighth grade pupil to sing a hymn at sight.

There may be some schools or classes in which this end is already achieved, but much public school music in the past has been chiefly training in following others. That is good, as far as it goes. It is better for boys and girls to learn to sing a little by listening to others than not to learn to sing at all. But every child ought to know how to read at sight the notes on the music page as well as he does the words on the reader page.

There are some children who seem utterly unable to carry a tune or to sing a song correctly even when they know the musical notes. But the great majority of pupils need only more careful teaching and more well-directed singing in the school room to enable them to sing simple songs with real pleasure to themselves and little discomfort to their hearers.

The ability to sing — not as the great singers do, but clearly and happily — is one of the most desirable gifts which can be cultivated in the child. It is well enough to attend excellent recitals and concerts all one's life. It is better to be able to sing for oneself at home or in church or in any community group.—The Greenville News.

It

The office of a gasoline service station is located where a storehouse of military supplies and a magazine existed when Bedford, Pennsylvania, was a frontier post in the eighteenth century. It is a little stone house almost hidden among several low, rambling frame sheds. During the Whiskey Rebellion in 1794 more than 5,000 troops were quartered on the grounds adjoining it and President Washington and his first cabinet were once established a block away. The old house was also used as a detention place for escaped slaves who were caught on the underground railway.

Urges Government

Monopoly to Stabilize
Raw Silk Trade

Yokohama, Oct. 4.—An increasing amount of attention has been paid to the importance of stabilizing the raw silk trade so that the market may be made free from the violent fluctuations to which it is frequently subject, says Diamond, a financial newspaper.

"When the market slumps the merchants and manufacturers try to keep the price of raw silk at a certain level and among these means are the restriction of output, and withholding of sales under a certain figure," says the newspaper.

"If these devices fail, they ask for government assistance on the ground that raw silk is the most important article of export in the country. The government has been doing everything to precipitate them."

"As the 1920 stock is being disposed of a new situation has arisen which promises to develop into difficulty as the season advances. When the spring cocoons appeared on the market the raw silk market at Yokohama maintained great activity and high price with the consequence that manufacturers bought cocoons at a very high price. The market, since has suffered a decline and raw silk is now quoted in the neighborhood of 1,800 yen. The cutting down of output and the restriction of shipments to Yokohama have agreed upon, but it is thought doubtful whether these artificial means will be effective in turning the tide of a declining market in the manufacturer's favor."

"Those who have carefully studied the causes are of the opinion that speculation enters too much into such an important industry and trade. For this reason they suggest that the speculative spirit be eliminated to a large extent if the trade is to be placed on a secure and sound basis."

"The carrying out of a government monopoly of raw silk may be one of the means that will secure stabilization of the silk market. This would not only guarantee the interest of cocoon raisers and silk manufacturers but the foreign importers also would be protected against loss as at present they are frequently the victims of a fluctuating market."

Come to Singing Convention

Shall we expect you at the Singing Convention Sunday afternoon, Oct. 8, at 3 o'clock? The Scripture says, "Come, let us reason together," and it also tells us in the 100th Psalm, "Make a joyful noise unto the Lord, all ye lands, serve the Lord with gladness; come before His presence with singing."

The First Baptists have kindly consented to let us use their song books for this occasion. We mean business. 1502-2t.

No Rest—No Peace

There's no peace and little rest for the one who suffers from a bad back, and distressing urinary disorders, Union people recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Ask your neighbors. Be guided by their experience.

J. B. Lawson, furniture salesman, 4 Long St., Union, says: "Not so long ago I had awful pains across my kidneys which were like a knife thrust. At night it was impossible for me to rest on account of this trouble. During the day there was a dull steady ache in the small of my back and my kidneys acted irregularly and the secretions burned in passage. Between this weakness and the trouble with my back I certainly did suffer. Knowing that Doan's Kidney Pills would relieve me of this trouble, I bought a box at the Palmetto Drug Co. They gave me wonderful relief and in a short time I was feeling just as well as ever."
