Back To The Woods.

Skidoo, 23 for him, so said Mr Possum, and back to the tall timbers he shipped his avoirdupois This high life was too much for him and he pined for the song of the birds and the rustle of leaves. While he undoutedly appreciated the hospitality of Mr. Summer, the requirements of polite society were too many for him; old nature re-asserted itself, and off to the woods he went. Being unable to bear the strain of a parting scene, Mr. Possum took his departure at about 2 o'clock Monday morning. At that time he quietly stole from his warm couch, cast one farewell look about him and bade adieu the scene of his short but pleasant visit. The call was from the wild and hearing it, he obeyed.

Now he roams in in his old element, better satisfied no doubt, yet not sorry for having seen something of the busy city life. For years to come he will entertain the youth of the jungle with tales great and wondrous, and as the time goes by, the wonder of it all will increase, and marvelous will be the stories of city life, told and re-told by this much-traveled sage.
