Jonesville Matters.

The Drunkard's Daughter.

Will you listen to my story,
A story so often told:
Of a cruel, rum-drinking father
And a child so hungry and cold.
Her little bare limbs were trembling,
And her face was pale and fair,
As she sat by the dying embers,
Praying for guidance and care.

She listened in tearful silence,
The hours were growing late,—
When the sound of a heavy foot-fall
Is heard within the gate.

His coat was old and ragged,
A pitiful sight you think;
He cared not for riches nor fortune,
So he spent his money for drink.

God help the little children
Who suffer for other's sin,
Open the door of heaven wide
And gently bid them come in.

Railroad companies increased the wages of their employes in 1906 by $100,000,000. Many large manufacturing and other business firms and corporations increased the salaries of their officers and laborers.

I am sure that our friends must be more and not less to us in the other world, and that this world only begins friendship.—Phillips Brooks.
