Union enjoys the unique and commendable distinction of being the single county in the State which makes a direct appropriation for its Confederate veterans. In addition to getting their pro rata of the $250,000 appropriated by the State, the veterans of Union receive the benefit of a levy of one-fourth of one mill on all the taxable property of that county. Charleston likewise occupies an equally unique position in that a tax of one eighth of one mill is levied for the militia of that county. The proceeds of this one-eighth mill tax is paid to the board of officers of the State volunteer troops in the city of Charleston.—The State.

Admirable Togo recently made an address at Tokyo cemetery to the departed spirits of the sailors and soldiers who lost their lives in the war. This address reveals in an impressive way the light in which the Japanese who serves his country regards sacrifice and death. The admiral said in part: "Looking back, we recall how, bearing the bitter cold and enduring the fierce heat, you fought again and again with our strong foes, and while the issue of the contest was still uncertain you went before us to the

The Negro Trained and Untrained.

of consciousness in the co-ordination of the sense centers of sight, hearing, touch, taste, smell, pain, heat and cold; muscle and tendon sense, thirst, hunger, and the sense of equilibrium of the body; in the perception of concrete objects, facts, ideas, and a perfect memory for them, resulting in good automatic power, lover of music and art. The outcome of the scientific investigation of the world's most celebrated anatomist discloses the facts that the true negro is lacking in apperception, reason and judgment. Dr. Bean says, in view of the established facts regarding the negro brain, his nature, and characteristics, it is absolutely essential that the negro be trained in a school. The object to be attained in a school of training the true negro is to cultivate his natural endowments and fit him for positions that he can fill. The training should be in manual labor of various kinds, useful in the industrial development of the South. The true negro is capable of learning in only one way,—objectively, by concrete perception and by memory of individual facts. He should be taught practical subjects in a practical way. Dr. Bean says that there are thousands of negroes being educated today and it would be better to direct that education in the proper way rather than to allow it to breed mischief, as it has done in the past. His plan is, that schools be established, presided over and taught by white men, in which the negro must be trained according to his capacity, and that those so trained should go among those of their race and teach, and devote themselves to the education of their own race. In order that such men may be impressed with the conditions of their own people and their needs, they should go among and study the problem in some large city like Baltimore, New Orleans, Atlanta, where the negro is at home in large numbers. They should study disease at first hand among their own people. They should learn the social evils of their race. They should be brought face to face with the mocking of religion practiced in many of their churches, a mere emotionalism. In order to avoid gross evil they should know the practices of the clergy, many of them, without scriptural authority, and based upon superstition. Dr. Bean says that a strong body of negro men so trained and at work leaving the race would do much good; surely out of the hundreds of negroes who are being graduated each year there are some who would do well thus to concentrate their lives. He says that the negroes in the South prepare our food, and in this way tuberculosis or worse contagious diseases may be transmitted. They tend our children and not only convey the great white plague, but worse still, by intimate contact they affect the morals of the young. As washerwomen they contaminate our clothes. They are foci of infection in any community. For our own preservation and purity, then, we should foster such education as tends to the cleansing of the nation. It would be easier to change the ignorance, immorality and diseased condition of the negro that not alter his brain or mental capacity, remove his past, eradicate race prejudice, change the attitude of the races, eliminate the mulatto element, perfect the habits of the negro, or provide the administration of justice to all alike. We fully agree with Dr. Bean if only such a measure were practical, as the number to be thus trained is too great in the first place, and the diverting their minds from the set purpose of mingling in politics as being among the first lessons taught them during the days of so-called reconstruction of the South. It would be something fitting and most devoutly desirable if the negro could be taught to know his real mental capacity and ability. There are several characteristics and attributes of the negro which doubtless have escaped the learned Dr. Bean, and many others who have written upon the negro problem, among which is an utter lack of gratitude, or moral obligation; to what section of the brain is wholly or in part responsible we are not sufficiently versed in anatomy to determine. The negro by nature has no energy; is thriftless and shiftless. Doubtless under the manner of training suggested the negro might become industrious and frugal and less prodigal. If by compulsory education (not otherwise) they would be compelled to learn and practice such as is within their capacity, thus by education and force of habit they become industrious and economical, this would be a great stride towards good citizenship that they never yet attained. It is the idle, the ignorant, who commits the crimes, because they have nothing else to do. We heartily recommend to the colored doctors, preachers and teachers the reading of Dr. Bean's two articles above referred to.

GIBSON FOUND GUILTY

Receiving and Disposing of the Stolen State Bonds.

The jury engaged in the case of the State vs. Thomas J. Gibson, indicted for "receiving stolen goods, knowing them to have been stolen," rendered a verdict of "guilty, with recommendation to mercy," at 3:45 o'clock yesterday afternoon, after having considered the merits of the testimony in the case in the jury room for about half an hour.

When the clerk of court announced the decision of the jury, there was profound silence throughout the entire court room and the defendant showed no signs of emotion, but retained the calmness that has characterized his actions throughout the trial. After the reading of the verdict, his attorney, Mr. Andrew Crawford, made a motion for a new trial, and the argument will be heard this morning.—The State.

Preacher Domination.

The activity of the preachers of North Carolina in trying to improve moral conditions in that State, has brought to front a school of political critics, who talk learnedly about the preacher meddling in politics. These critics are in every county and every town. It has ever been thus. God's faithful ambassadors cannot expect to find favor in the eyes of men who are allied, for political purposes, with the forces of evil. It is good for North Carolina that she has in the pulpits of the State men who are not afraid of the whip-lash of the political boss, or fear the criticisms of those who shout

There are lots of little fellows going about over the land who, in their great wisdom, talk about "Blue Laws" and "Closed Towns" and "Puritanical People" and so on. These fellows usually wear good clothes, drink liquor, smoke cigarettes, patronize gambling places and cuss. No, no, they don't want any restrictions laid on them. They want all the pasture fences torn down, that they may go wild. And were it not for the oversight of older heads and the restraining influence of the preachers of the gospel, these young swell-heads would soon be helpless in the quagmires of self-destruction.

They kick against "preacher domination" in public affairs. The young fellow who is opposed to the chosen minister of God proclaiming against the sins of the day and trying to elevate this sin-cursed race, has got on the wrong track—that's all. And if he doesn't turn right about face he is sure to wind up in company with Dives. We'll follow the leadership and companionship of the preachers every time. They know a sight more about politics than they are given credit for. As a rule, they keep out of partisan politics, except when some moral issue is involved. And the way they do pitch in then does our soul good, and we believe it makes the angels of heaven happy. "Preacher domination" is not hurting in North Carolina yet awhile.—North Carolina Baptist.

Meeting of Stockholders of Aetna Cotton Mills.

An adjourned meeting of the stockholders of Aetna cotton mills was held at Spartan Inn, Spartanburg, S. C., February 26, 1907. At this meeting the board of directors was reduced from nine to seven, and the following were elected directors to serve one year, viz: Jas. E. Mitchell, C. S. Mitchell, W. H. Sartor, B. F. Arthur, J. F. McGowan, O. A. Robbins, D. P. McTrayer.

It was resolved at this meeting that an office of secretary and assistant treasurer be created, and the directors were authorized to fill this office as soon as they deemed necessary. There being no further business, the stockholders' meeting adjourned. Immediately after adjournment of stockholders' meeting the board of directors went into session and at said meeting of directors the following were elected: W. H. Sartor, president; B. F. Arthur, treasurer; Wm. H. Tuffie, secretary and assistant treasurer.
