JUST SIT STEADY, SAY CONGRESSMEN

Lever and Ragsdale Confer With Garrison—Talk About Militia.

(Wednesday's State.)

Officers and men continued their fight yesterday to save the South Carolina National Guard. Every effort will be used to retain the $200,000 worth of property now in the possession of the 31 companies in the State. The secretary of war will be asked to suspend action in the matter of federal property until after the inauguration of Richard I. Manning as governor.

W. W. Moore, adjutant and inspector general, left yesterday afternoon for Washington, where he will confer with the chief of the division of militia affairs with reference to the militia situation in this State.

Order of Disbandment.

Following order signed by the governor and Adjutant General Moore was sent to company commanders of the National Guard:

"Under the provisions of section 18, military code of South Carolina, it is hereby ordered and ordained: That all of the militia of the State of South Carolina and all of the volunteer militia of the said State be, and they are hereby, dissolved, mustered out and disbanded. This order to take effect immediately."

"Sit steady in the boat," was the substance of a telegram received in Columbia yesterday by A. E. Legare, colonel, commanding the Second Infantry of the National Guard, from Congressman Lever and Ragsdale.

The congressmen said that a conference had been held with war department officials and that a letter was to follow with reference to the militia situation in this State.

Itinerary for Inspection.

Adjutant General Moore yesterday sent out the itinerary for the annual inspection of the National Guard. The inspection will begin in a few weeks.

Col. Legare announced yesterday that the order of the governor mustering out the companies would not affect the annual meeting of the National Guard association, which is to be held in Columbia January 20.

The reorganization of the militia, it is said, will be discussed by the officers at the meeting of the association.

ONE DEAD; OTHER IN JAIL

Lexington, January 10—Special: J. Calvin Goodwin, a well-known white farmer, was shot and killed, and George Rish, also white, is charged with the killing, that occurred in the lower section of the county Friday morning, the scene of the homicide being the home of Fickling Sharpe. From the evidence adduced at the inquest, which was conducted by Coroner Weed, it seems that Goodwin was under the influence of whiskey; that he went to the home of Sharpe, where Rish was, and trouble between the men arose, resulting in Rish leaving the house, followed by Goodwin, and that the two men had some words. It is said that Goodwin caught hold of Rish and, it is claimed, attempted to strike him. Rish, it is said, begged Goodwin to "let him alone," and, according to an eye-witness the pistol fired, Goodwin reeled and went back on the porch of the Sharpe home. He died a short while afterwards.

Immediately after the shooting Rish started for Lexington to give himself up to the sheriff, who met him on the way. Goodwin and Rish were brothers-in-law. Goodwin was about 60 years of age. He leaves a wife and several children. Rish is also married and has several children. He is said to be about 35 years of age. He has employed Senator W. H. Sharpe to look after his defense, it is understood.
