Mimnaugh's Little Engine Bound Rew West.

THIS morning it starts out from the round-house with full pressure and a clear head-light, with the unerring judgment of MIMNAUGH as its engineer. The construction of this little engine is remarkable, as it is run without fire or liquid.

IT BLOWS

To notify fogy competitors or any other invaders, whether coon or bear, to CLEAR THE TRACK

Its speed is immense and it never stoops to drink. This little engine is bound to suit the western prairies, as it carries all classes of passengers. Its construction is grand—as it carries the FIRST LADIES of the LAND. THE RUSH STILL UNABATED We have decided to close our three establishments and open one large house in Knoxville, Tennessee. So the goods must be sold, let them bring what they will.

Very respectfully, J. L. MIMNAUGH.
