Debate Abolishment Of April Fool Issue

Hypatian Literary Society Decides Against Changing of Annual Edition

"Resolved: That the 'Yellow Sheet' should be abolished" was the query of the debate held in the Hypatian Literary society Wednesday afternoon.

The contest between Caroline Hodges, affirmative, and Marian Finlay, negative, was a close one, but the verdict of the judges was for the negative.

The argument of the affirmative was that the "Yellow Sheet" had degenerated of late from the original purpose, which was to afford clean fun and wit, and had become only the expression of the personal spleen of a limited few. The contention was made that the April 1 number was not a democratic institution, and since it did not represent the feeling of the student body should not be allowed to continue.

The negative, upheld by Marian Finlay, affirmed that the Yellow Sheet was not harmful in its effects, and that it acted as a safety valve to the students. Miss Finlay stated that the staff of THE GAMECOCK was large and quite representative of the student body, and that furthermore the whole school was cordially invited to hand in material.

While the judges were deliberating a request without precedence in the history of the society was made by Mary Reese and Dorothy Penland, that they be allowed to debate further on the same subject. The request was overruled.

The program was presented by Caroline Gaillard, critic.

Rumored: Well, if she has made up her mind, he might as well cease struggling.

EXCHANGES

What is the best type of memorial for a senior class to leave to a university? At the University of Maryland, the majority of seniors questioned were in favor of a sun dial. Others thought a clock, a piece of art work would be most appropriate.

It's a great life at the University of Mexico, if you're quick on the draw. Several sophomores were shaving the head of a rather unruly freshman when he decided that the matter had gone too far. So he broke loose and started on a dead run—then one of the sophs drew a revolver, shot him in the leg, and they continued the shaving process.

Pipes for Coeds

A professor of Northwestern University advocates that the women students "abandon future use of cigarettes, forbidden on the campus, and learn to smoke pipes, which are more restful." And, we may add, more manly.

After interviewing more than 2,000 candidates for admission to the University of Rochester, Charles R. Dalton has reached the conclusion that the studious type of student has displaced the "rah-rah" kind of collegian. Prospective students, he says, now shop around for the kind of courses they may obtain, instead of blindly going to college for the sake of going to college.

"Boys scarcely in their teens," he said recently, "now approach me and inquire about specialized subjects and what facilities colleges have for meeting their individual requirements. The seriousness of their inquiries leads me to believe that future college generations will be far more intent upon scholastic work than were their predecessors."

The University of North Dakota is planning a hall of fame for prominent students on its campus. In it will go men who make both Phi Beta Kappa and varsity football letters.

The School of Journalism at the University of Missouri has a woman at its head for the first time in the history of the school.

A headline in the LaVerne college paper proclaims "College Orchestra not to be Sneezed at in First Program." We take this to mean that the students are to wait for the second program. But how is it possible to control one's sneezes?

Forty alumni of the University of Nebraska were listed on the Nebraska state ballots at the election this year. The majority of these were graduated from the College of Law and are now practicing law in the various municipalities throughout the state.—Davidsonian.

Glee Club Closes Semester's Work

Singers Give Two Final Concerts Plans Announced for Next Year

The boys' glee club closed its season this week with two appearances, both in conjunction with the girls' glee club. The first program was presented Wednesday evening in the chapel at a concert sponsored by the symphony orchestra. At this time the club sang a Bach chorale and a cantata, "I Hear America Singing." Thursday evening the singers appeared with the girls in a program sponsored by the Shriners. This entertainment was given in the city auditorium before a large and enthusiastic audience.

The club sang two popular numbers and several spirituals. Specialty numbers were presented by Herman Dorn, Plute Wimberley, Roy Chamberlain, Hollis Ayres, and Leaphart, the club accordionist. The girls' club put on several choruses and specialty numbers including songs and dances. The Dean Dances appeared next and were well received.

This performance marks the last appearance of the boys' club this season and Director Matteson expresses himself as being highly pleased with the quality of the work and the cooperation of the members. This year the club bought its own bus, made and extended tour of the Middle West and played successfully in Chicago and other large cities. A large number of state trips were made to the surrounding towns.

Next year an even more ambitious program is being considered. The club plans to make a trip to New York via bus and return by water of the Clyde line. On the way to New York many cities of the East will be played.

ORCHESTRA GIVES FINAL CONCERT

FEATURES MUSIC WEEK

National Music Week was celebrated at the University last Wednesday night by the University Symphony Orchestra, Madame Felice de Horvath, director, in its final concert of the season.

The program was the most varied of the entire season. From the first bar of Weber's weird overture, "Oberon," the audience was treated with a complete and representative program of the University department of music.

Assisting the orchestra was the University Choral Society of eighty voices, under the able direction of Maurice Matteson. A number each was sung by the boys and girls glee clubs while the Choral Society concluded the program with the cantata "I Hear America Singing," with full orchestra accompaniment.

Soloists were Mrs. Richard Lane and Marie Epton Jennings. Mrs. Lane's interpretation of Verdi's "Pace, Pace, Mio Dio," was the outstanding vocal solo of the season. Miss Jennings played the difficult "de Beriot Violin Concerto" in A Minor. She displayed the polish that has so distinguished the de Horvath studio. Both soloists were accompanied by the orchestra.

The quartet, Mrs. Furtick, Mrs. Crooks, Mr. Grimes, and Mr. Matteson, sang "Greeting to Spring," by Richard Strauss.

The lighter part of the program contained three characteristic dances from "Henry VIII." These numbers were immensely enjoyed for their wide variety.

MORSELS

By MORSE

Ever since the elections started, people have been asking in increasing numbers, "Who writes the political pot?"

The ancient languages department went to Athens last week. Calm yourself, Hortense, it was just that li'l town down in Georgy.

LeRoy Want wants a verse for a girl's album. Gosh, the poor lad must have it bad: he was asking everybody for a verse on the eve of his election to the presidency of the Euphradian Literary Society. Will this one do, Mister Editor?

*Alas, I know not what portends:
I wonder what it is that sends
Shivers, when you look at me,
Up and down my vertebrae?*

*Roses are red,
Violets are blue,
Grass is green,
So are you.*

A worn-to-a-frazzle professor, so we heard, recently read a whole set of quiz papers without grading them. It probably would have been more satisfactory all 'round if he had graded them without reading them.

So at last we've seen an absent-minded professor. Maybe if we stick around long enough we'll see a collegiate student.

The campus cynic has recently been going around with a strained expression on his classic features. When questioned, he said it's because he's been trying to give a darn about the elections.

We suggest that the literary societies get together and constitute themselves a School of Political Science, just by way of making the title conform to the facts.

Campus types: Byron, Max Revelise; Machiavelli, John Bolt Culbertson; Francois Villon, John Moroso; Major Hoople, Bill Broughton; Gilda Gray, Bully Quattlebaum; Sweetheart of Sigma Chi and all other men's organizations.

"Unworthy, unusual, and dishonest." No, Mr. Bennet. Unworthy and dishonest if you will, but not unusual.

Following the selections by the Columbia College girls, L. E. Leanhart gave a short talk on the Y. M. C. A. retreat which was held at Citadel last weekend. R. M. Newton, chairman of the vesper service committee, talked briefly concerning the interest shown in the meetings each week. J. Sam Taylor, president of the "Y," supplemented Mr. Leanhart's report on the retreat.

This weekend the old and the new Y. W. C. A. cabinets go on a retreat to Canaba Lake, which has been loaned them by friends.
