Staff Election Opposed By Clariosophic Constitution Breached

Tuesday's Joint Meeting Is Scheduled To Decide Election Controversy

Registering disapproval of the recent Gamecock election by the Board of Publications, the Clariosophic Society Tuesday night passed a motion inviting the Euphradian Society over to its hall next Tuesday to consider the protest.

The objection has risen due to a breach of the constitution of The Gamecock, which declares that no two students on the board may belong to the same fraternity. John Bolt Culbertson and Carlisle Roberts are members of Blue Key fraternity, the latter having been initiated while an undergraduate at Wofford College.

Another complication that arises out of this is The Carolinian election which was recently held by the same board. Further the two members of the same fraternity were on the board at the time of the election of the staffs of the two publications last April. Some students have declared that this would cause these elections to be classified as "illegal" also.

"It is felt that the Euphradians are the logical ones to withdraw their man and elect his successor," declared a prominent Clariosophian. "The Clariosophic within the last few months have recalled two different men in order to obviate this difficulty."

A vote of confidence in their two board representatives was passed by the Euphradian Society at its January 19 meeting. This came after that society received a Clariosophic committee which informed them of the existing conflict with the constitution and board representatives.

Carolinian Gets Bid To A. C. C.

Campus Monthly Invited To Join Association Of College Comics Of The East

The Carolinian, literary and humorous magazine, has received an invitation to join the Association of College Comics of the East, officials of the magazine announced today.

The Association which is composed of the foremost college comic and literary-humorous magazines in the United States, is similar to the National College Press Association in which The Gamecock holds membership.

Announcement was not made as to whether or not The Carolinian would accept the invitation, but it is understood that the magazine may decline due to the extra expense of membership and trip to the convention at the Hotel Astor in New York.

Jack Crawford Tells Of Various Types Of Snakes

By Millie Taylor
"Man has seen fit to describe snakes as lowly and repulsive and this opinion has existed for ages. Yet, but a few years ago, man discovered an instrument that certain snakes carry which is of immense value to himself—the hypodermic needle," says Jack Crawford, director of physical education for men and probably the best authority on snakes in South Carolina.
"All snakes originated from the lizard. In spite of this fact there are 111 species of snakes in the United States and only 97 species of lizards.

Pre-Med Studes Discuss Thyroid

At the regular semi-monthly meeting of the local chapter of Alpha Epsilon Delta, national honorary pre-medical fraternity, held Wednesday night in LeConte College, an interesting program was presented, including an informative paper on "Diseases of the Thyroid," written by Paul Greenstein.
Discussion was held and plans made for sending one or more representatives to a national convention of the organization to be held at Howard College in Birmingham, Alabama, on March 25.

Atlantan Gives Religious Talks

Robinson Of Columbia Theological Seminary Arrives Tuesday For Lecture Series
Dr. William Robinson of the Columbia Theological Seminary will deliver a series of religious lectures here commencing Tuesday morning and terminating Thursday evening with the climactic discourse, "The Certainty of the Gospel's Way of Salvation, Faith."
Dr. Robinson is a graduate of Columbia high school and Hampden-Sydney College, Virginia. He also studied at the Columbia Theological Seminary and Princeton University. His brother, D. W. Robinson, Jr., is adjunct-professor of law here at the law school.

Educators, Financiers Visualize School Head

Opinions Forwarded To Gamecock By Alumnus; Conflicts Exist On Points

What should be the qualifications of the next president of the University of South Carolina?

Should he be educator or business man?

Ought he to be a native South Carolinian?

Should he be a member of the faculty at this University?

How old should he be?

What should be his qualifications in respect to personality, social life, public speaking, scholarship, and religion?

What sort of wife should he have?

Six prominent American educators and three nationally-known big business men have given their answers to these and other questions in response to requests from James D. Evans, University alumnus of the class of 1901, now of the Merchant and Evans Company of Philadelphia. He has sent them to The Gamecock, which publishes them in full in this issue. The business world is represented by David F. Houston, Daniel Willard, and Bernard Baruch.

Those responding from the educational field are all deans of schools of education in large American colleges and universities: University of Pennsylvania, University of Chicago, Columbia University, Harvard University, Pennsylvania State College, and the University of Virginia.

Conflicts of opinion exist on some points.

Explaining his part in the matter, Mr. Evans says:

"The impending selection of a president for the University has elicited my warmest interest as an alumnus who has the welfare and growth of the University as a living force in the cultural life of South Carolina very much at heart.

"This election has seemed to me to be a matter of such very great interest and one fraught with so much importance to its future as to demand any assistance which could possibly be

Evils Flayed By Shepherd

Gives Inaugural Address As Euphradian Leader; Other Officers Installed

"Students interested in Journalism and work on the publication staffs should not be forced against their will to join a literary society. We have too many good journalists now who have shown themselves to be poor society members."

Thus declared M. H. Shepherd, Jr., newly elected president of the Euphradian society, in his inaugural address Tuesday night.

"The literary societies should be careful and tolerant, not arbitrary, in regard to our publications. We point

Co-Ed Debaters Compete Honor

Debating Team Chosen At Joint Meeting Of Girls' Societies Wednesday

Try-outs for the co-ed debating team will be held Wednesday afternoon, February 24, at a joint meeting of the Hypatian and Euphrosynean societies.

The University co-eds will uphold the negative side of the debate, the query for which is: Resolved, That a Scaling Down of War Debts Would Improve the Economic Condition of the World.

According to the Debating Council, the initial appearance of the team will take place at Winthrop on March 4. This is the only definite part of the debating schedule to be made public.

$125 Donated To Sidewalks

Social Cabinet Gives $100 And Debating Council $25 To Paving Movement

Dr. Havilah Babcock today announced that two organizations had given $125 to the brick sidewalks movement during the last few weeks.

The Social Cabinet turned over $100 to the chairman of the movement after it was decided that this was one of the best purposes to which the money could go.

Twenty-five dollars was recently voted the movement by the Debating Council as evidence of their interest to put the brick sidewalks on the campus.

Mrs. Melton Not To Seek Council Post

Mrs. William Melton, wife of the late University President, announced last night that she had reconsidered and will not be a candidate for election to city council, as announced last week by The Gamecock.

Mrs. Melton has been associated for a number of years with the University Alumni Association. She has played a prominent part in Columbia social life.

Troy Stokes Takes Office

Installed As New President Of Clariosophic Society; Succeeds W. C. Herbert

"We must fight our way to our former position of prestige on the campus by not allowing other activities to come between us and the good of the society," Troy T. Stokes, told the members of the Clariosophic literary society in his inaugural address as president Tuesday night. He succeeds W. C. Herbert.

Stokes, a senior from Timmonsville and president of the student body, began his address by paying his respects to the outgoing administration and congratulating them. He also made

Rehearsals Begin For Next Drama

"So This Is London," a comedy by Arthur Goodrich will be offered by the Palmetto Players the latter part of this month, William Dean, director, announced today. Rehearsals began this week, and great progress has been made from the first.

The story is one of the young American boy who falls in love with and becomes engaged to the daughter of titled English parents, and the complications which surround the bringing together of the two families.

Local Chapter Sigma Nu Wins Scholarship Trophy

The Gallaher scholarship cup, Sigma Nu's highest chapter award, has been awarded to the South Carolina Delta chapter for the 1930-1931 scholastic year, Charles Edward Thomas, editor of the Sigma Nu magazine, announced through a letter to the chapter Saturday.
The cup which has been awarded for six years by Edward G. Gallaher, prominent hardware manufacturer of Norwalk, Connecticut, was won the first three years by the University of North Dakota chapter, and the last two by the chapter at the University

Frats Fight Fee Charged By Yearbook

Annual Editors Retaliate With Threat To Go To Press Without Section

Continued refusal to pay $30 for each social fraternity page in the Garnet and Black was the consensus of opinion of the Pan-Hellenic Council at its Monday afternoon meeting. The group meets this afternoon to take up this and other matters.

"The council passed a resolution some time ago to refuse to pay the sum asked by the annual officials," stated President William Donelan. "If any of the fifteen social fraternities that compose this council go ahead and have a page in the yearbook, they will be subject to expulsion under the present agreement."

Waldie Bushaw, Garnet and Black editor, stated last night that it would be impossible to charge less for the page, the actual cost being $37.76.

"The annual staff would be glad for every fraternity to pay the actual cost of its particular page. This would not mean a saving to the smallest group, however, as the lowest cost would be about $32.

"We are not in a financial position to make any other compromise with the fraternities, as our student activities appropriation is much less this year."

The council has been notified that unless it takes definite action by March 1, the annual will go to press without the social fraternities section. Another phase of the fight for lower rates developed recently when Omicron Delta Kappa and Kappa Sigma Kappa agreed to await the outcome of the Pan-Hellenic action before paying for their page.

Fifteen Co-Eds Join Sororities

All Sororities Get Pledges As Short Rushing Season Comes To Close

Fifteen girls accepted bids from the eight sororities on the campus in the chapel Wednesday afternoon, John A. Chase, registrar, has announced. Bid day came as a climax to a rather short rush season which began last Wednesday and ended with the beginning of silent period Tuesday evening.

Those accepting bids were: Alpha Delta Pi: Annie Ehrlich, and Mary Adele Wilson, both of Columbia. Alpha Omega: Susan Campbell, Elizabeth Strother, Margaret Reaves, Mary Stork, Elizabeth Harvey, and Agnes Hughes, all of Columbia. Chi Omega: Brownlee Hair, of Columbia.

Delta Delta Delta: Elsie Taber and Mary Stewart Aycock, both of Columbia.
