"Wild Man" Szakasci is shown in a rage of fury after flooring two opponents in one of Carolina's home games. Szakasci is on the verge of attacking the referee who is ordering him from the game. Often called "The scourge of the hardwood" by fear-stricken opponents of the Gamecocks, the "Wild Man" became infuriated when these two innocent players teamed up to score against him. Prompt medical attention was given the men and they should be recovered by next season. Immediately after this picture was taken, Szakasci looped the referee through the goal three times before his colleagues could stop him. His coach explains, "Oh, he's just playful!"

Bare Facts Shown Bump A Month Club

Miss Slipsy Shows Knee, famous stripper deluxe, spoke before the weekly meeting of the USC BAM Club last Wednesday. She uncovered her impressions of the game of football, choosing as her subject, "It's the take-off that counts."

Miss Knee, a master of deceptive maneuvers, said that she found the naked reverse especially effective in her lines and recommended it in grid tactics. She also emphasized the disastrous results of a fumble.

Slipsy continued, saying, "Pass defense cannot be overlooked." She is noted for her great defense against the passes of the New York Wolves of the Gnashful Association.

Miss Knee concluded, "In football the teams are numbered, but we use letters in my profession. When you are far ahead in football you use the third or fourth string; I often get down to the G-string."

"Let me leave with you a suggestion that has brought me great success and will be of value to football coaches. Get warmed-up in the first quarter, start 'em guessin' in the second, wait for an opening in the third, and, in the fourth, really show 'em what you've got!"

ANNOUNCEMENT

Joe Grugan announced today that intramural polo teams will be formed at Carolina. Any sororities, fraternities, or other organizations stupid enough to believe this may be insulted by contracting Joe at his office.

More Surplus Junk Is Put Off on University

President Normal Myth announced yesterday that temporary tennis courts had been obtained by the administration for use by Carolina students. They were used by the army during the war as an obstacle course, but "necessary alterations will be made."

Myth said, "The courts will not be on the campus but will be accessible to those wishing to use them. Students may reach them by taking the Silver Meteor to Remote Corner, only 97 miles north of the Maxcy monument and presenting their athletic cards to the armed sentries watching over the courts. Veterans should bring their discharge papers."

For the convenience of the students, daily weather reports will be flown down from the courts. Students should limit their games to one set so that persons waiting will not be kept too long.

Football Prospects Appear Horrible

"Frankly, we'll stink," is the reply that came from Rex Enright when approached on Carolina's 1947 football prospects. Rex admitted that USC had rounded up the scum of high school hoodlums and held spring drills simply to see how terrible a team could become if it tried.

"We're switching to the X-formation, which usually confuses us more than it does our opponents. We might score, if we're lucky," said Enright indifferently.

Can't Think of A Headline At The Moment

R. U. Derti, prominent Columbia fugitive, announced today plans to give a Poor Sportsman Trophy to a Carolina student each year. The trophy will be given to "promote dirty playing, to develop poor losers and all-around unethical conduct on the part of athletes at the university."

Derti is well-known in police circles having visited some of the nation's leading penitentiaries. As a football player for Grandstand U. he was ordered from seventeen of eighteen games for unsportsmanlike conduct and is holder of the conference slugging record. In 1927 he was voted by his classmates as the greatest single discredit to the school in history.

The trophy will be presented by Derti in person, as he is now on the state pen parole list. The winner will be judged by prominence in the following qualities:

- (1) Ability to pull a dirty play undetected.
- (2) Most noticeable demonstration of being a poor loser.
- (3) Best gloater in times of victory.
- (4) Most consistent violation of training rules.
- (5) Worst attitude and greatest drawback to team spirit.

When interviewed on the subject of the trophy, Derti smiled through two glossy black bars and said, "There has been entirely too much stress put on

Meeks Chosen Flop-o-the-Year Avant&AdamsAlsoDisappoint

Bryant Meeks, Jr., has been heralded by the Gamecock sports staff as Carolina's "Flop 'o the Year" in a vote taken yesterday. Meeks was closely followed by Ray Avant and Al Adams in the poll to select athletes who did not live up to expectations for the 1946-'47 school year.

"Mentball" failed to make the first string All-America football team, landing down on the second eleven, leaving followers awestruck that he would sink so low. Meeks continually messed up offensive plays—for Clemson, Furman, Alabama, Duke, and others. Chosen as his greatest failure was the time he threw a block into sportsmanlike conduct at Carolina. After all, rules are made to break, so why not break 'em right? My position as public enemy No. 1 came through a concentrated effort to develop ignoble characteristics; I got there the hard way. I want to do my part in helping the youth of today along the crooked and wide path.

three Citadel men and only two had to be carried from the field. Ray Avant was consistently slow in knocking out opponents in his bouts for the USC boxing team. Avant was often guilty of taking as long as a minute and a half to two minutes to send his adversary to the Land of Nod, keeping spectators impatiently waiting. True, Avant won all his fights, but several times his opponent was still in the ring while being counted out. Ray's biggest bid for "Flop 'o the Year" came when he had to use two hands to win the Southern Conference boxing crown.

Al Adams came third by being not quite unanimous choice for All-Southern basketball center. Adams was merely indispensable in the Carolina line-up and often let only four men bottle him up under the goal. Adams was pushed to shoot 21 points against Duke in the conference tourney and once or twice failed to come down with the ball from the Duke backboard.

Hrolnvzq Wzgsulr, Rushin' half-back for Vodka high last fall is reported ready to enter the University of South Carolina for the 1947 football season. He will enroll in the school of hibernation, taking the following courses: Violin, 11; Snake Charming, 13; Eu-

When questioned on the probability of his entering Carolina Wzgsulr replied, "Rooney pudat voot reet putty-putty skavar mufu," which means in English, "A high, hard tackle."

Hrolnvzq is a great believer in the "courtesy roll," saying shyly, "Rokovski laboritch alavado hurtonska," meaning, "It cuts down on injuries."

It's my pleasure to announce that the sixteenth annual frog jumping contest will get under way on April 17—please come and bring a fellow "Frog!"

rhythmics, 24; Relaxation, 222; and Beverages, 2.6.

Carolina coaches expect great things of Hrolnvzq "if he comes out for football." He was never able to show his full prowess in high school, having a rushing average of 5 yards, but his interference was described as "not so good."
